Prices in Biggest Spiral Since World War II

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index rose by 12 per cent during the last 12 months for the fastest rate of gain since price controls were being taken off after the Second World War, Statistics Canada reported today.

The index was up by 1.1 per cent in November and is 12 per cent above that of a year earlier.

It was the highest rise for November since 1925 although two other months this year have exeeded a 1.1 per cent rise in the index.

Higher prices for food and new cars accounted for about two-thirds of the increase in November. Household operation costs also were major contributors.

The last time there was a faster 12-month rise in the consumer price index was between October, 1947, and October, 1948, when it went up 12.2 per cent.

Wage and price controls brought in during the war were taken off gradually, ending finally in 1949.

The only price break last month was a decline of nine-tenths of one per cent in the public transportation index. This was due to cheaper train travel — not lower fares, but more economy-price days due to the tourist travel period.

The private transportation index was up 2.4 per cent, with more than half of this increase due to higher new-car prices.

Sugar, fresh vegetables and milk price rises were major contributors to a 1.3-per-cent rise in the food index. These were partly offset by lower prices for fresh fruit and many meat products.

The November index level was 174.1. Stated another way the mix of consumer items that could be bought for $100 in 1961 cost $174.10 last month, $172.20 in October and $155.50 in November of last year.

The purchasing power of the 1961 dollar was down to 57 cents by last month.

The consumer price index is based on a 1967 survey of family spending patterns and weights of major component indexes are: Food, 25 per cent; housing, 31 per cent; clothing, 11 per cent; transportation, 15 per cent; and other items, 18 per cent.

The price indexes for November do not account for the effects of sales tax changes announced Nov. 18 in a federal budget. These affected a variety of items, including cars, liquor, tobacco, bicycles and building materials, and apply at the wholesale level.

Statisticians said it will take up to two or three months for the impact of most of the tax changes to reach consumer prices.

The November food index level was 15.7 per cent above a year earlier. The restaurant food index was 18 per cent higher while there was a gain of 15.3 per cent in the index for food eaten at home.

The next largest 12-month gain was 13 per cent in the index for household operations, followed by 12.4 per cent for the private transportation index. Oil prices account for a large share of these increases during the year — gasoline for cars and heating fuel for houses. During the last three months gasoline prices have dropped.

Higher prices for men's clothing was the main contributor to a one-per-cent increase in the clothing price index.

The health and personal care index rose by 1.2 per cent, mainly due to higher prices for hair care.

New Wheels For PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has a new car. It cost more than $80,000, is equipped with armor plating and bullet-proof glass and has two telephones. (See picture on Page 56).

The car is his alone. Except in the most unusual circumstances he will not have to lend it to the Queen or anyone else.

Because it is silver grey it probably will become known as the grey ghost or silver dart as it carries the prime minister about in super safety.

The 1975 Cadillac Fleetwood appeared this week when the prime minister met the prime minister of Iran who arrived Monday for a six-day visit.

Arab Cash For B.C.

He said B.C. becomes the second Canadian province to borrow from the oil-rich Middle East but was unable to devulge which other province had been successful in gaining access to Arab financing.

The premier said the borrowing was to be spent on Peace River and Columbia River Hydro electric development but he said it was necessitated by the disaster on the Columbia River," referring to agreements by the previous administration.

The major part of the $100 million will be spent on the Peace River, Barrett said, again referring to expenses brought about by his predecessor in office.

"We have inherited administrative bungling that may cost us hundreds of millions of dollars, not only in B.C. Hydro, but B.C. Railway. I don't want to say any more about that now."

Barrett commended deputy finance minister Gerry Bryson for putting together the $100 million bond transaction which was completed in October. Payment in Canadian funds arrived Dec. 3 during the premier's visit to China.

The money is borrowed for eight years at an annual interest rate of 9.75 per cent, which Barrett said is equivalent to 9.52 per cent on a Canadian issue.

In Ottawa, an indication that many of the millions of dollars Canada sends annually to Iran for oil are available for investment in this country is being given by the Iranian prime minister.

The subject was mentioned in talks between prime ministers Amis Abbas Hoveyda and Pierre Trudeau Tuesday and was expected to be raised again in talks with federal ministers.

The Iranian prime minister expressed interest in almost any form of investment in a productive industry dealing in items Iran might want to import, a Canadian government official said Tuesday.

Hoveyda mentioned such industries as agriculture, forestry and pulp and paper, bust said real estate was not on the list.

Review Pledged —Barrett

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday that Finance Minister John Turner has promised to review tax policies on natural gas sold through provincial petroleum corporations.

Barrett, who returned to B.C. Tuesday from the conference of finance ministers in Ottawa, had strongly criticized Turner for a budget measure which allows the federal government to tax companies selling natural gas to provincial agencies as if they were selling at market prices, whether or not the agency pays a market price for the gas.

Barrett said that when Energy Minister Donald Macdonald agreed in September to raise the export price of natural gas to $1 a thousand cubic feet, he established the B.C. Petroleum Corp's buying price of 22 cents as the fair market value on which private producers should be taxed.

But Barrett said he got a commitment from Turner to "review everything in terms of the fair market price — hopefully he will back off."

The premier said there were "no divisions" at the conference among the provinces in their opposition to the federal government's plans to disallow deduction of provincial royalties from corporate taxable income, a policy enunciated at a meeting in Toronto early this year.

Turner also said Tuesday he has made no decisions on how

Region Pays $750,000 For Dump

The Capital Regional District is buying the Hartland Road garbage dump and some surrounding land for $750,000.

The purchase involves 788 acres in an agreement for sale with Victoria Disposal Co. Ltd. and Norman Copley, disclosed by regional board chairman Jim Campbell in an interview Tuesday.

Negotiations have been going on privately for some time and last month the regional board gave initial approval to a bylaw authorizing the borrowing of $1 million "for the purpose of acquiring land and fixed plant for refuse disposal facilities."

The regional district is the local government agency responsible for garbage disposal but existing dumps are privately owned.

Hartland Road — biggest of the dumps — is at the end of Hartland Road, just beyond Saanich in the Highland district.

"There are no specific dates when we'll begin operating the dump," said Campbell.

"There are quite a few possibilities regarding change but for some while at least the main disposal will be on the basis of current practice at Hartland Road."

The Hartland Road dump, which serves mainly the Greater Victoria municipalities, is a landfill operation where refuse is buried.

Campbell said "some specialized functions" will be developed at the site including an area for receiving septic tank wastes "which have to be put in an area where they can be safely isolated.

While disclosing the Hartland Road agreement for sale, Campbell indicated the regional board is interested in a second dump site to serve the western suburbs including Langford and Colwood.

"I believe another site is being contemplated and this money (the $1 million bylaw) might supply an additional site but it will also be for capital costs to make Hartland Road better," he said.

SOUTHWEST WINDS gusting to 54-miles-an-hour this morning whipped up a heavy sea and sent waves crashing against the breakwater at Ross Bay. By mid-morning the wind had dropped to 40-miles-an-hour and indications are that it will subside by nightfall. No damage was reported.

FERRIES SETTLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Ferries' 2,000 unlicensed workers have been awarded wage increases of $120 a month during an 18-month agreement, according to the Vancouver Sun.

The paper says the workers, including deckhands, stewards, ticket collectors and cooks, are to get an initial, across-the-board increase of $90 a month, retroactive to April 1. On April 1, 1975, they will receive another increase of $30 a month and a cost-of-living adjustment.

The adjustment will give the workers an increase of $8.38 a month for each one per cent rise in the consumer price index for Vancouver from March 1, 1974, and March 1, 1975, the Sun says.

Body Back

BANGKOK (UPI) — Burmese police recovered the stolen body of U Thant early today after widespread rioting erupted and the declaration of martial law.

Police moved in with tear-gas shortly after midnight local time to disperse the students guarding Thant's body in a makeshift mausolem on the campus of Rangoon University, according to radio reports.

The swift-moving crisis began Sunday when students and monks seized the body of the former UN secretary-general during its funeral demanding that Thant be given a burial befitting a world leader. They then buried it in a makeshift mausoleum on the university campus.

U.K. STOCKS NOSEDIVE

LONDON (AP) — The London stock market dived to a 20-year low today and the British pound dropped to its lowest level ever against the world's major currencies.

Financial sources blamed the declines on reports that Arab oil money was being pulled out of London for Paris. The French franc strengthened in money markets.

Stockbrokers said Britain's monthly trade figures for November, due out Thursay, also were depressing share prices. A deficit of some $1 billion was expected.

DUMMY GUARDS URGED

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP John Reynolds suggested Tuesday that penitentiary officials take a hint from prisoners and place dummies on night watchtower duty at a British Columbia penitentiary.

The query followed a Commons exchange in which Solicitor-General Warren Allmand explained that two men escaped from the New Westminster prison last week after placing dummies in their cells.

The escape came during the midnight-to-8 a.m. period when the watchtowers are not manned because prisoners are supposed to be in their cells.

"In this case, they put dummies in their cells and hid in the yard," Allmand said. "After lock-up, they escaped."

Street Hawkers May Win A Reprieve From City

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

There may yet be happy hawkers on downtown Victoria's sidewalks.

Apparently doomed to extinction last week, by the proposed imposition of a whopping $700 trades licence, the street vendors were at least partially back in official favor by Tuesday as city council continued discussing its draft trades licence bylaw.

Among the council members who appeared to be having second thoughts on the matter was Mayor Peter Pollen, who inquired at the caucus meeting what the objective was in levying such a high licence fee.

Was it to "clear them (hawkers) off the streets?"

Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of the commerce, industry and tourism committee, who helped draw up the bylaw, replied that it was.

"We don't want street hawkers," he said.

But Pollen retorted: "I find that rather incredible. I don't think any of us are out to eliminate hawkers entirely."

The mayor said street vendors were "a disaster" on Vancouver's Granville Street Mall, but added: "Having said that, let's also say that in certain areas and under reasonable control they are fulfilling a function in the community."

He said "patronizing" editorials written by "nitwits" in Victoria newspapers, on city council's attitude toward the practice of street selling, weren't helping toward clear and unemotional debate.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson said a ban on hawking wasn't the intent of council's earlier "instructions to Tindall." He proposed lowering the $700 licence fee to $250.

Adoption Probe Sought After Korean 'Kidnap'

The human resources department wants an investigation into procedures involved in bringing Korean children here for adoption, following a report that one such Korean child may have been kidnapped.

Superintendent of child welfare Vic Belknap said in a Canadian Press story that B.C. wants the Canadian embassy in South Korea to make the study.

B.C. parents will be discouraged from adopting Korean children until the investigation is completed, said Belknap in the story.

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi last week halted an adoption hearing after it was learned the Korean child being adopted was allegedly kidnapped.

Human resources had been told that the child, three-year-old Uyng Im Lee, had been abandoned in Seoul and then taken to the government adoption agency there.

Korean adoption officials had found a B.C. family for the child in March.

However, during the adoption hearing in Seoul, people claiming to be parents of the girl told the Korean agency the child had been kidnapped by a housemaid on Nov. 17, 1972, Belknap said.

The provincial government is now trying to determine the real identity of the girl and why the parents waited more than a year to come forward, he said.

"In Korea it may not be that simple," he said. "I understand there are many, many abandoned children."

Mrs. Ira Preddy, deputy superintendent of child welfare, said today she was surprised to hear Belknap wants adoptions discouraged until the investigation was done, just because of one incident.

She said the number of overseas children coming to B.C. is still only a trickle, about 30 a year.

They come from South Korea and South Vietnam, with a few from Bangladesh and India, she said.

"There are quite a lot of people who are interested in offering their homes," she said. A continent-wide shortage of orphans in North America has forced people to look to Asia and Africa for children.

Adopting a child from Vietnam or Korea can be a "slow tortuous business," said Mrs. Preddy.

In Vietnam the adoption procedures must go through the Vietnamese courts, which can take from six to 14 months, she said.

Stewart Facing Bleak Christmas

STEWART (CP) — The 2,000 residents of this community 125 miles north of Prince Rupert face a bleak Christmas and, for that matter, a bleak 1975.

The community's great provider, the Granduc copper mine, has announced that it will lay off 480 of its 800 employees before Feb. 1.

"It's going to cut our town in half," said hotelkeeper and Mayor Ian McLeod in an interview Tuesday.

"It's our only payroll really. Ninety cents out of every trading dollar is contributed by Granduc."

Many residents turned out last Friday to show their disapproval to Alf Nunweiler, minister without portfolio in charge of northern affairs, when he flew in from Victoria on a previously-arranged tour.

Nunweiler, however, had to be told that the cutback had just been announced and that many people were blaming the provincial government's new mining royalties.

The company, announcing that daily production would be cut 4000 tons of one-per-cent copper ore a day from 8,000, said "this action was necessitated by the unusually rapid increase in costs during the past year and drastic drop in the price of copper over the past six months."

It said the new provincial mining royalty was a contributing factor.

While Mayor McLeod admitted town residents blamed the provincial royalty, he said the federal government should also share the blame because of recent tax changes that affect mining.

B. J. McKay, a miner and spokesman for one of five unions at Granduc, said the company's move is part of a campaign against the provincial government by the mining industry.

He said representatives of the five union's will be meeting with the company to discuss the winddown.

Meanwhile, businessmen and storekeepers are wondering about the effect the move will have on their businesses and families are wondering about their futures.

"The small people will be hurt most; families with children that now don't know where their future lies," said Mayor McLeod.

"Certainly there are no underground mining jobs left in the province. So they will have to go elsewhere. I don't think they'll lie around Stewart long on unemployment insurance."

Single workers who came into the area for two or three months at a time — and who form a high percentage of Granduc workers — will not be as inconvenienced by the company's move.

And people looking farther ahead are more worried.

"People don't know what the situation a year from now may be," said storeowner Charlier Fenner. "There could be a shutdown."

ALBERTA EYES B.C. PORTS

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government is considering some type of investment in West Coast ports because of the federal government's failure to upgrade the facilities at Vancouver and Prince Rupert, Alberta Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner said Tuesday.

At a news conference after speaking to 400 delegates at the Unifarm annual convention, Horner said the federal government had spent "little at Vancouver and even less at Prince Rupert" to improve the grain shipping facilities.

"Perhaps we as a province should spend some money, not in operating the ports but to improve the facilities," he said.

GULF DROPS B.C. PLANS

Gulf Oil has cancelled its entire $100 million exploration program for B.C. and other companies are dropping their drilling programs because of the federal-provincial battle over resources taxes, Socred MLA Ed Smith charged Tuesday.

The "impasse between federal and provincial jurisdictions relative to taxation of this (petroleum) industry is creating havoc in northeastern B.C.," said Smith.

He said Pacific Petroleum has cancelled 25 of 29 well sites, Chevron cancelled three wells and Aoco has cancelled most of its $2 million program.

Thirty-two gas wells planned for B.C. have been dropped, said Smith, and 10 drilling companies have abandoned plans for 172 exploration and development wells in Alberta and B.C., valued at $14 million.

"As of now B.C.is bad news to the oil industry," said Smith.

Gas Tax Pledge

to tax natural gas sold through provincial agencies in British Columbia and Saskatchewan.

A budget measure introduced last month would allow the federal government to stop the province from taking what federal officials considered to be an excess profit.

If the agency buys at less than prevailing market prices, the company selling the natural gas to the provincial agency might be taxed as if it were selling at market prices.

Saskatchewan Power Corp. has been buying gas under long-term contracts at prices substantially below current prices and passing on savings to consumers.

The Crown corporation sells only to consumers in the province and provincial officials have complained bitterly about prospects of higher consumer prices.

British Columbia Petroleum Corp., also a provincial Crown corporation, sells both to provincial consumers and for export.

Civil servants from the three governments were to meet this week to discuss what Turner called technical details.

When asked if sales to a province's consumers might be exempted from the budget provision, Turner said: "I haven't excluded that."

He had no comment on whether the federal government might claim back taxes if they decide to collect extra revenue.

At the Ottawa meetings, the smouldering dispute over resource taxation that eventually may be settled only by higher domestic oil prices was brought into sharp focus.

The closed sessions failed to solve the issue, however, creating only a shaky solidarity among the provinces against federal plans to take a bigger share of oil revenues. The oil-consuming provinces do not want higher prices for consumers.

The issue now will be tossed to a meeting of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers sometime early next year.

No date for the meeting has been set.

No one at the two-day session wanted to talk about the possibility that domestic oil prices will be raised, but there was general agreement that taking more from consumers would be an effective way to get more money for both levels of government and still leave funds for company exploration programs.

Korean Child 'Kidnapped'

in Saigon, with the Canadian parents paying the foster parents, she said.

This slow process, uprooting the child once to go to the foster home, then again to come to Canada, is hard on the child, she said.

Mrs. Preddy said she was in Vietnam in August trying to work out a speedier procedure.

Normally a B.C. couple wanting to adopt an overseas child will come to the human resources deparment, which will do a study of the prospective home.

This information will be sent to the overseas government, which will find a suitable child and relay information about it back to B.C.

If the Canadian couple agrees on the child, court proceedings begin.

Once the adoption is completed, the children are flown here in small groups of three or six, escorted by some adult, said Mrs. Preddy.

Efforts are now being made to set up a national office to handle overseas adoptions, instead of having provinces do it on their own, she said.

CITY STREET CRIES COULD RING

council that last summer the city attempted to cater to hawkers by setting aside a portion of Centennial Square and establishing a set of ground rules "which were not followed."

The resulting scene, with a handful of people displaying wares laid out on the ground, "didn't add anything to the square," Hood said.

Three suggestions came from Ald. Sam Bawlf: specify the range of items that can be sold by street hawkers (not including such undesirable commodities as "second-hand clothing"); bring the licence down to a "reasonable" level; and prohibit selling on sidewalks less than a certain width, to avoid impeding pedestrian traffic.

Bawlf also said the hawkers' stands should be along the curb and not along business frontages on the other side of the sidewalk.

But Tindall remained skeptical about sidewalk selling under any circumstances.

"You are creating a mammoth program we will never be able to enforce," he told Bawlf.

"I think we should eliminate hawkers except in designated areas, the way we had them originally."

(When the draft bylaw was first presented to council three weeks ago, it listed such areas as Bastion Square, Centennial Square, the 700-block Yates and the lower Causeway as the only parts of the city where hawkers would be able to ply their trade. Council scrapped that proposal in favor of an all-exclusing licence fee).

On Tuesday, council finally agreed that the bylaw be introduced in its present form at Thursday's council meeting, and that individual council members submit written amendments before the bylaw is finally adopted early in January.

Makeshift Ferries

SEATTLE (AP) — Small power boats, sailboats and chartered cruise craft braved gale warnings Tuesday to carry about 1,200 commuters across Washington's Puget Sound on the fourth day of a ferry strike.

Other commuters drove 90 miles or more across the Narrows Bridge through Tacoma despite 50-mile-an-hour winds through the narrows that made driving hazardous.

The state operates the green-and-white fleet that normally carries about 2,000 commuters daily between Seattle and Bremerton and Winslow on Bainbridge Island and other areas on the east side of Puget Sound.

There were traffic jams in Tacoma.

The Bainbridge Island Chamber of Commerce provided cruise ships, and private pleasure boats were pressed into service to accommodate other commuters.

the weather

Dull damp and dingy days have dominated the districts as a series of attackin Pacific disturbances march onto the British Columbia coast. Mild and moist Pacific air has invaded most sections of the province leaving only the northeastern extremity in the icy grip of Arctic air. Consequently temperatures throughout the region will be above normal. Partial clearing greeted many early risers along coastal sections today as a rapidly-building ridge of high pressure approached the south coast, resulting in strong westerly winds through Juan de Fuca Strait.

Four-Year Wait, Nobel Forgotten

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — After waiting four years for his Nobel gold medal, exiled Soviet writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn left it by mistake in the presentation hall and it was back at Nobel headquarters today.

A Nobel foundation official said: "We expect Mr. Solzhenitsyn to come later and pick it up. He may be rather tired today after all the ceremonies. It will remain here for the moment."

The heavy solid-gold medallion, elegantly packed in a red leather case, had already lain four years in a safe when the Soviet writer finally received it from King Carl Gustaf of Sweden on Tuesday.

Then Solzhenitsyn walked out of the concert hall, accidentally leaving the medal and diploma on his seat of honor.

CHURCH PATROLS AFTER ROBBERIES

GARY, Ind. (UPI) — Police have assigned 20 officers to guard worship services at every church in Gary because of armed robberies and a rape incident at two churches in three days.

The police department said the patrolmen — including 10 plainclothes detectives — will cruise by each church during Sunday services.

"I think we are headed back into the olden days where people will do anything to see how far they can go," said the Rev. Carel Cargle president of the Gary Ministerial Association.

"If the churches stand by and let this type of element take over, we might as well throw up our hands," Cargle said. "I think God is speaking to the churches. He's saying this world is in your hands so clean it up."

Arms for Sheriffs

Deputy sheriffs transporting prisoners from correctional institutions to provincial court in Vancouver Monday were armed for the first time.

However, deputy attorney-general Dave Vickers told the Times today the move to arm sheriffs was not a departure from established policy formed last July.

The policy clearly states, he said, sheriffs would be armed but only in exceptional circumstances.

Deputy sheriffs in the province became alarmed over their vulnerability following two escapes from unarmed sheriffs last month.

One provincial deputy Monday was equipped with a .38 calibre pistol on each wagon-load of prisoners, replacing armed police constables who accompanied the deputies and prisoners last week.

The handguns are issued to the sheriffs at the city jail for trips to the B.C. penitentiary and the lower mainland regional correctional centre and are turned back in following the trips.

$2B Oil Plan 'Deferred'

CALGARY (CP)—Home Oil Ltd. said today it has "indefinitely deferred" plans for a $2-billion oil sands extraction plant in northeastern Alberta because of rising construction and development costs.

Home Oil president R. F. Phillips said because of uncertainty over oil prices, escalating costs, and the effects of federal and provincial tax proposals, the company was indefinitely deferring its 103,000-barrel-per-day plant.

Home Oil holds an 87.5 per cent interest in the project, with the remaining 12.5 per cent held by Alminex Ltd.

The plant was to have been built starting in mid-1978, and would have gone into production in 1982 at a site about 30 miles north of Fort McMurray.

The company said Friday it was reconsidering its plans because of the pull-out of Atlantic Richfield Canada from the Syncrude oil sands project, and because of rising costs and general uneasiness in the Canadian petroleum industry.

Meanwhile CanDel Oil Ltd. of Calgary announced today it is considering withdrawal from another development in the Alberta oil sands.

A spokesman for St. Joe Minerals Corp. of New York, CanDel's parent organization, said discussions have been undertaken between CanDel and other four companies in the 122,500-barrel-per-day oil sands plant.

The group is headed by Petrofina Canada Ltd. with 35.3 per cent. Other companies are Pacific Petroleum Ltd., 32.7 per cent, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Ltd., 14.6 per cent, and Murphy Oil Co., 10.5 per cent.

CanDel spokesmen in Calgary refused to discuss the report, but a report in the Calgary Herald quotes unnamed business sources as saying CanDel has located an unnamed purchaser for its 6.9 per cent interest in the project.

Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd. withdrew from the Syncrude oil sands project last week because of supply uncertainties and rising costs.

The St. Joe spokesman said current problems over the final cost of the project and future crude oil prices were factors in CanDel's decision.

Get the Trains Moving

The strike by B.C. Railway shopcraft employees which has closed down the government operated line for nearly three weeks is hurting northern communities and the government continues to shrug its shoulders. It is fine for Labor Minister Bill King to say the disruption is part of the dynamics of the collective bargaining system but because of the shutdown northern communities have to pay up to twice as much for their food and northern forestry operations, already curtailed by an industry-wide slump, may be forced to lay off more employees because the companies can't get their products to market.

Ad nauseam this government hypes its image as the people's government. Yet here is a case where the people — and most of the north voted NDP in 1972 — are suffering because of a strike in an essential industry and the government mumbles airily about the collective bargaining process. When it comes to the people versus a labor union, the government acted in the public interest during the lower mainland firefighters' strike. Why the stalling now? Is it because the labor minister sits on the BCR board, a position he should have resigned long ago?

Now we witness the spectacle of northern mayors coming to Victoria Thursday to plead with the labor minister to reach a settlement; Alf Nunweiler the minister without portfolio responsible for northern affairs, discusses the matter with the labor minister; the premier back from China consults with the labor minister on the issue. Talk, talk, talk but the trains remain on the sidings. Even if the dispute was settled this week it would take at least one week to check the tracks and right of way before the trains could be moving.

After nearly three weeks, the government and its workers are at a stand-off. The union is asking a 30.5 per cent pay increase over nine months and the government is offering 19.5 per cent. Under the NDP's own labor code a one-man industrial inquiry board can be appointed to bring down a settlement. If the government does not intend to initiate new attempts at negotiation — and this is the impression it leaves — then a commission should be appointed immediately to bring this disruptive strike to an end.

Be of good cheer, taxpayers, Canadian diplomats in Peking will enjoy Christmas with all the trimmings this year courtesy of the Canadian Forces, which is allowing St. Nick to ride aboard one of its giant Hercules transport planes with a load of turkeys, parcels and other items of Christmas cheer.

Officially designated a "training flight," the 25,000-mile journey across North America and the Pacific Ocean from CFB Trenton, Ont., will also touch down to deliver similar loads in Japan, Hong Kong, the Phillipines, Australia and New Zealand to our far-flung diplomatic corps.

Cost of Operation Xmas has not been disclosed. Canadian Forces personnel are sensitive about this — officially the purpose of the flight is to give air crews experience in flying strange routes. Only once before, when Prime Minister Trudeau visited the People's Republic of China last year, has a Canadian Forces aircraft landed in Peking.

Diplomatic staff have been told not to talk about the flight. Everyone is understandably touchy, especially considering that turkeys just like ours are available in China and at most parcels take a week and a half to travel by post from Canada to China. Anyway, what ever happened to the old traveller's maxim: "When in Rome ...?"

The striped-pants set should enjoy Christmas this year — their turkeys and other goodies undoubtedly will be the most expensive consumed by Canadians anywhere.

The World on a Raft

An American once sorted out the differences between a republic and a monarchy by saying a monarchy is a merchantman which sails well but will sometimes strike on a rock, and go to the bottom; a republic is a raft which will never sink, but then your feet are always in the water. With the overwhelming rejection of the monarchy in Greece, it seems most of the western world prefers to have wet feet.

Only five monarchies still exist in Europe. The three Scandinavian royal houses and the Netherlands monarchy are democratized to the point where they are just a vestigial bow in the direction of a simpler age.

In Britain, the monarchy has assumed a different role, a sort of focal point for the nation's, and in some cases, the Commonwealth's sentiments.

As with the demise of so many other monarchies, King Constantine's end came about because he dabbled in politics. Sometimes the monarch supported dictatorship of the colonels; other times he spoke weakly for a return to democracy. The army sent him packing when they were in control and now the electorate has pulled the throne out from under him. Perhaps that explains why the British and Scandinavian monarchies have thrived in an egalitarian age. They are careful to serve the political realm rather than vice-versa.

HAROLD GREER

What Else Need We Know?

TORONTO — Concerning Dr. Morton Shulman's charges that a corrupt relationship exists between various federal Liberals and the leaders of the Seafarers International Union of Canada, the great danger is that they will be dismissed as just another exercise in McCarthyism. This has always been a problem with Shulman's muckraking, using that term in the old-fashioned and honorable journalistic sense. By linking together events which are not necessarily related, by implying conclusions which may or may not be warranted, by insinuating motives and explanations, he weakens his case and makes it easy for his targets to cry smear.

But a Shulmanism is not quite the same thing as a McCarthyism. When the late Senator Joseph McCarthy waved a sheet of paper before an audience in Wheeling, West Virginia, two decades ago and declared he held in his hand a list of 81 cary-carrying Communists who were officers of the U.S. state department, he created McCarthyism because, as it turned out much later, he had no such list, he had no such names and the paper was in fact a blank envelope he had taken from his pocket. In short, the classic McCarthyism is a total lie.

'Key Liberals'

A Shulmanism is far from that. Our NDP crusader from High Park may get some of his facts wrong, he may go too far in his implications, he may often misunderstand the legal aspects of a situation, but there is always a kernel of truth in what he says, a core case which justifies public concern and reform. The trouble is that Shulman can be his own worst enemy in getting people to listen to him seriously.

Consider his crusade against the SIU, which began publicly in the Ontario legislature on the night of Nov. 19. In that speech, he made three basic points.

The first was that there should be a public inquiry into how this union operates. Its leaders, he claimed, are no better than thugs. They have created a reign of terror in the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes system. Dissident members who oppose them or their "sweetheart" contracts with the shipping companies are beaten or threatened into submission. Votes are rigged. Victims fear for their lives if they complain to the police.

The second point was that the Ontario government should constitute the public inquiry because the federal government, where the real jurisdiction lies, will not do so. And the third point was that the federal government will not do so because "someone in Ottawa has been paid off."

Such is the union's political influence with "certain key Liberals," Shulman said, that there cannot be a federal inquiry because there are "too many important people who might be affected" by it.

Here, of course, we have a Shulmanism: no names, no specifics, no proof, just the insinuation of a corrupt motive. Subsequent to this initial speech, however, there was a spate of press disclosures and on Dec. 3, Dr. Shulman did give some specifics to the legislature in support of his contention that there should be a provincial inquiry because the federal Liberals were too "intimate" with the SIU to act, prompting still further reactions and disclosures in the press.

Out of all this, what do we know once the wheat is separated from the chaff, taking "know" to mean evidence that can be supported as fact?

We know that members of the SIU have alleged by affidavit, both to Shulman, the police and to the federal department of labor, that they have been beaten, threatened and denied employment through the union's hiring-hall system because they have opposed the SIU leadership in some manner.

MORTON SHULMAN
. . . Shulmanism, not McCarthyism

We know that the police have been investigating these charges since early last April, that they have found complainants fearful and reluctant to testify, but that so far five prosecutions have been launched. We know that as part of this investigation, the union's telephone at its Toronto headquarters was tapped.

We know that during the federal election campaign last June, Labor Minister John Munro called SIU president Roman Gralewicz at this number and received a promise of $500 for his campaign and the delivery of 5,000 votes for his re-election in Hamilton East. We know the money was paid and then returned by Munro on Sept. 3, after Munro discovered the police were investigating the SIU.

We know that Munro, two months before, had intervened in stalled negotiations and more or less arbitrated a new contract between the SIU and the Canadian Lake Carriers Assocation. We know — or at least we may assume — that when a labor minister participates in the collective bargaining process he is supposed to be impartial.

We know that federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, who has been crying McCarthyism and pooh-poohing Shulman's charges since day one, also received SIU money and support for his re-election in Notre-Dame-de-Grace.

We know that Allmand's official agent in that election, and long-time friend, was Joseph Nuss, who was one of the SIU's lawyers before the Norris inquiry into industrial turmoil in 1962-63. According to Shulman, he has continued to act for the SIU on a retainer basis.

Despot Ruled

We know from the public record that the SIU, then under the leadership of the notorious Hal Banks, did everything it could to thwart and sabotage the Norris inquiry and that Joseph Nuss as counsel lent himself to this endeavor, so much so that Justice T. G. Norris commented in his report that Nuss had made the mistake of identifying himself too closely with his client and permitting himself "to be used to some extent in an endeavor to delay the inquiry and to frustrate its purposes."

We know that the major recommendation of Justice Norris, accepted by the government of the day, was to place the SIU under a federal trusteeship during which time, hopefully, it would be transformed from an undemocratic, despot-ruled organization into a democratic union.

We have good reason to suspect this hasn't happened. We know that the Ontario government feels, on the basis of the police investigation, that there should be a public inquiry and that it should be constituted by the federal government, for the good and proper reason that that is where the jurisdiction lies.

What else do we need to know?

FRED CLEVERLEY

Garrison Worries Manitoba

WINNIPEG — As earthmoving machines chew away at American farmland south of the border, Manitoba politicians are doing a slow simmer at the prospect of the potential flooding and ecological damage possible from the $400 million Garrison diversion project.

The project, a favorite of U.S. Senator Milton Young, is designed to use Missouri River basin water to irrigate some 250,000 acres of North Dakota farmland.

What is bothering Manitoba is that the water, once used for irrigation, will be dumped into the Red River watershed and will carry the pollutants it picks up during the irrigation process into the water system of a half dozen Manitoba communities. In addition, the extra volume of water is expected to extend the time, if not add to height, of the annual spring floods on the Sourls and Assiniboine Rivers.

While the project has been opposed by the province, the department of external affairs, and by U.S. environmentalists, Manitoba politicians are afraid that it is already so far advanced, and so much money has been spent on it, that it cannot be reversed without adverse political repercussions in the United States.

Wants More

Manitoba is relying on the Boundary Waters Treaty of 1909 as its basis of objection, but unfortunately the treaty simply grants recourse to the courts if either the United States or Canada can prove damage to watersheds because of the actions of the other country. The treaty also provides only for compensation to the damaged party, something the United States has already indicated it is ready to pay.

Manitoba wants much more. It wants guarantees that the project will not pollute Manitoba waters, not money to clean up the pollution once it arrives. At the base of the objections is the content of the soil to be irrigated on the American side of the border. The soil is such as to guarantee that any irrigation would bring an increase in the amount of total dissolved solids carried across the border. These would affect the color, taste and acceptability of water used in communities like Portage la Prairie, Emerson, St. Jean Baptiste, Morris and Selkirk.

At Portage, the changed water might affect the operations of the Campbell Soup plant. Of equal concern is the changes which would affect wildlife. For the first time since the last glacial period more than 10,000 years ago, water from the Missouri system will have access to the Red River system. Water which in the past has drained south will be permitted to drain north. With it will come other forms of fish life, including a rough Missouri fish called the gizzard shad. Experts say this fish could overwhelm the present sporting varieties of pike and pickerel which occupy northern waters.

The ecologists are worried that the irrigation plans include the draining of more than 30,000 acres of what is described as "wetlands." This may change the migration patterns of wild game birds.

While the Manitoba government is now protesting vigorously in its attempts

SIDNEY GREEN
. . . Manitoba can do little to get the Garrison diversion stopped, both Premier Ed Schreyer and Resources Minister Sidney Green have come under criticism themselves for failing to act soon enough.

Although the project was approved by the U.S. congress in 1968, with construction beginning three years later, it was not until 1970, when work on the key McClusky canal began, that Green wrote a letter to Ottawa expressing Manitoba's concern. It was a year later that Ottawa sent its first diplomatic note to Washington expressing concern about the effect the Garrison project might have on this province.

The matter simmered on the Manitoba government's back burner until last year, when it erupted during the legislature session. The government had successfully negotiated an arrangement whereby Manitoba experts can sit in on U.S. studies and work on the Garrison. Green takes the position that this is all, short of acting through the external affairs department, that Manitoba can do.

Opposition spokesmen take a different view. They maintain that Manitoba should mount an all-out campaign to stop the Garrison and members of the Conservative party caucus backed up their position a few months ago by making an unprecedented trip to North Dakota where they met with Governor Arthur A. Link.

Green argues that should Manitoba officially take such an attitude, it might succeed only in solidifying U.S. elements which are presently battling over continuation of the project by giving them a common, foreign target at which to shoot.

Manitoba has powerful friends in Washington who are committed to stop the Garrison project. These include the U.S. government's Environmental Protection Agency and the president's Council on Environmental Quality.

Can Sue U.S.

Even in North Dakota, a group of farmers calling themselves the Committee to Save North Dakota launched a lawsuit calling for an injunction against the Garrison project.

Early this year, the U.S. state department told Ottawa it would honor its treaty obligations regarding Garrison, but would allow construction to continue. At the same time Congress voted another $10 million to the project.

This week Ottawa and Manitoba got together to issue a statement restating their fears that the Garrison diversion will adversely affect Manitoba, and raising serious questions regarding the adequacy of the United States studies of the project. The questions in effect echoed those raised earlier by U.S. environmentalists.

But the work continues. And as Sidney Green is fond of saying, "short of sending troops, there is little we can do about it."

If the Garrison project is completed as scheduled, and the feared pollution appears, Manitoba then, by the provisions of the international treaty of 1909, has access to U.S. courts to sue for damages. Proving those damages is another matter.

Egg Boredom

I am of the opinion that the collapse of eight dinner guests at the B.C. Federation of Agriculture banquet is not the mystery it would appear. Considering the fact that the topic of speeches would run something like, i.e. "Consumer versus the B.C. vegetable marketing board, consumer versus the meat board, consumer versus the egg board," it is obvious that they collapsed either from the stifling odor of the rotten egg scandal or just plain boredom. — Ed Wakefield, 970 Birch Road, Sidney.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of December 11, 1914

A mob of yelling Chinese in pursuit of two lone Scotchmen broke the echoes of the Oriental quarter last night in a lively free-for-all in which the compatriots of John Burns received a somewhat severe mauling. John Maclean and John Mackenzie were in police court this morning, charged with assaulting Chong, assistant at the Maple Leaf rooming house on Fisgard Street. Both pleaded not guilty. Chong told the court the two men came shortly after midnight to ask for a room and disputed the price which was 50 cents a night. They knocked him down, stuffed a handkerchief in his mouth, and robbed him of some money, keys and a knife. He said he later chased them into Chatham Street but denied having anything to do with the mob of Chinese which followed after. Each man was fined $5 apiece or five days in jail, after Magistrate Jay didn't believe their story that Chong initiated the dispute.

'Bright, beautiful, beaming little faces.'

As the plane circles for a landing, there is something very different about the countryside below us. It's flat and dry, checkered with fields and villages and criss-crossed by winding lanes and irrigation ditches, but there are no great divides in the land. Missing from the tidy Chinese countryside are the ribbons of highway, the concrete and asphalt freeways that dominate the landscape of North America.

We glimpse Peking in the distance but it's shrouded in smog—the dusty, brown smog of coal-burning furnaces. And when we finally drive into the city it's no different. The November streets are dominated by browns and greys and the dull, red brick facades of aging buildings. Only the occasional red banner or poster brightens the sidewalks, perpetually filled with a mass of blue and green-jacketed workers.

The buildings everywhere seem slightly dirty and unkempt without a hint of fresh paint but the homes inside are immaculately clean and tidy.

Streets are filled with millions of identical, black bicycles and there are constant traffic snarls as cars and horse-drawn and motorized carts break the rhythm and path of the cyclists.

There are no neon lights, no large advertisements, no tall buildings and no gas stations in sight. It's a strange and different world unlike anything imaginable.

We meet Mr. Yu—the worried, fussing, unbendable little man who has been given the task of overseeing the two press representatives in the B.C. delegation.

Immediately we are presented with a wall of bureaucratic hassles, starting with the discovery neither of us had brought three passport photos, as per regulations. A quick trip to a photographer, barely two hours after we stepped off the plane, solves that problem.

Then I'm informed I can't send my stories home via Hong Kong because my little red press card, which allows me to send telegrams, reads Victoria, not Hong Kong. I explain it's the only way stories can get to Victoria and go through great dramatics, swishing my arm in big circles to describe the route from Peking to Hong Kong to Toronto and Victoria.

There is much muttering, phone calls back and forth and talk of reporting to superiors, but they finally give in.

Can I send my stories collect? Not without another little card. Can I get that other card? No.

I give up and we decide it is wise to tell Mr. Yu as little as possible and send home our film and stories as best we can on our own.

The Peking Hotel is a grand old building. Its huge, long lobby is musty and filled with strange smells. Its ornate walls and finely decorated ceilings tell of a rich, decadent past.

But the new wing of the hotel, completed just two months ago, is a stark, Westernized structure decorated much like a Canadian hotel might have been in the 1950s.

Outside the hotel, crowds ranging from 10 to 100 people are always gathered. Someone tells us it's not the continuous stream of official looking people being chauffeured to the door that fascinates the crowds, but rather the doors themselves — automatic sliding ones that open like magic without anyone ever touching them.

In two weeks no one can make judgments or draw conclusions about a country. All we are left with are superficial glimpses — glimpses that were too often neatly arranged by our guides.

The people seem generally happy, always well-fed and consistently well-clothed. From what we saw their general well-being was indisputable.

We didn't see a great deal of merriment in the people who crossed our paths and we saw few signs of affection except towards small children, who were treated with the greatest care and attention. We saw no fighting or signs of disharmony, and the only hint of strong authority was displayed when the Canadians gathered a crowd on the streets and someone would move in to disperse the throng.

The green-jacketed members of the People's Liberation Army were everywhere but never in large numbers and we seldom saw anyone with a gun.

Almost everyone wore the traditional Mao jacket and pants — with more important officials in dark blue or grey silk versions — but children, especially in the south, were often dressed more individually in colorful sweaters and shirts.

In Shanghai, tired of being one of "the group" from morning until night, I decide to test all the stories we hear about being closely watched and followed wherever you go in China.

I sneak out of the hotel during "rest time" and think I see our Mr. Yu watching me from behind a pillar. I hurry down the street and cross the road, quickly checking behind me, only to find no one is on my trail.

Elated by my new-found freedom I march boldly down the street, camera in hand. The crowded alleyways, the strange assortment of different architecture in China's most Westernized city and the people themselves present ideal picture-taking possibilities, but I hesitate, remembering the virulent campaign against Western cameramen following the anti-China Antonioni film.

A Canadian embassy official in Peking told me he never takes his camera anywhere anymore, just to avoid trouble, and I begin to worry about carrying my tiny camera. I notice people are staring at me and some are starting to follow behind. All of a sudden I feel very out of place, an intruder, and I look behind, wishing Mr. Yu had followed me after all.

I stop and the people behind me stop. I smile and they don't smile back. The freedom was great but I think I've had enough and I scurry back to the hotel, deciding I'll invite Mr. Yu along next time I sneak off.

Our hosts and interpreters are unbelievably kind, continually patient and unceasingly concerned about our welfare. For three days before our trip to the northern oilfields, Mrs. Ho, the only woman in the group, queries me about the warm clothing I have for the journey. Nothing will satisfy her until I agree to buy some thick Chinese longjohns and borrow a heavy cotton padded coat with fur trim.

When we reach the frozen oilfields I'm more than thankful for the extra layers of clothing but despite all the care and concern of our hosts, almost everybody in the group comes down with a cold or sore throat.

Mrs. Ho is a shy, quiet woman in her late twenties. She speaks English very well and despite her retiring manner, responds good-naturedly when people make jokes and try to coax her out of her shell.

As the visit progesses, we get on closer terms with most of our interpreters and in talks with Mrs. Ho we discover that she and her husband live in Peking while her small son lives in Shanghai. It's not unusual for families to be separated in China, since the state assigns all jobs, and spouses are often sent to different parts of the country. But in Mrs. Ho's case the spearation was a matter of choice, and for us the choice is a baffling one.

In Shanghai, the boy is taken care of by his grandmother, as many Chinese children are, and Mrs. Ho explains that the two love each other very much. The grandmother refuses to live in Peking because she speaks a different dialect — so the family remains separated.

"Don't you miss him?" everyone asks when they have a chance to talk with her alone.

"Well yes, I suppose so," is her answer to me. "But it's better this way. My mother loves him and can take better care of him than us."

Another banquet. I hate to admit it but I'd trade my next three meals for just one steak or a fresh green salad or for that matter a grilled cheese sandwich.

But this dinner is especially good. The Big Peking Duck restaurant is the city's finest and the lengthy meal offers the best food of the trip. Like every meal, we begin with several plates of cold hors d'oeuvres including fossilized eggs, jellied beef, large shrimp and something tough and stringy that comes from the sea.

Those delicacies are followed by deep-fried duck liver, prawns, dry barbecued meat of some sort and a dish of rapeseed and mushroom slices.

Then comes a dish involving several more parts of the duck and finally the duck itself — juicy, tender meat, rolled in thin pancakes with spicy sauce and onions. Bone marrow soup is next, followed by toffee apple dessert and fruit.

Noticeably missing from the menu is fish — usually served whole on a platter, its beady dead eyes fixed on some poor soul at the table.

Accompanying the meal is the always-plentiful Chinese beer or mandarin orange pop; Chinese red wine, rich like Dubonnet but not as sweet; and the deadly Mai Tai, a powerful white liqueur that most of us dare only to sip.

We are chauffeurred back to the hotel, bloated and satisfied, wondering what ordinary Chinese people really eat.

The Peking Hotel has automatic, push-button elevators but each one is manned by an operator at all times.

I seldom saw anyone approach the information desk in the lobby but four or five men were on duty all the time.

In the countryside it was the same. Twenty people would be standing around one small patch of road repairs and two or three people would be sitting on a cart dragging one log or load of stones. No one seems to work very hard and the jobs might seem redundant to us, but at least everyone is working — nobody is unemployed.

We are standing at the edge of a cotton field in the south and the only black member of our group announces he has never picked cotton before. Everyone has a good laugh and there is a great deal of fanfare and picture-taking as he picks his first tuft of cotton.

But the real joke comes when one of our Chinese hosts leans over and quietly starts singing "Old Man River" with just the right southern twang.

As an innocent, wide-eyed traveller in China, impressed and often awed by what I was shown, it was something of a jolt to run into fellow Canadian reporters stationed in Peking.

"Sure, I guess I'm cynical," said one. "I've probably been here too long. I was eager and enthusiastic when I first came here but I've seen too much. I've seen what the system does to people. Sure they're well-fed, well-clothed and they've got housing but you can't just stop there."

We visit Peking University and are shown a first generation computer which the Chinese tell us was built by students right on the campus. The two Peking-based reporters look at each other and smile — they don't believe it.

But why would they lie?

"I don't really know," said one. "But it's like any relationship, if you find you've been deceived too many times you stop believing everything you're told."

Bright, beautiful, beaming little faces. The children in China are so captivating it is difficult to describe the effect they have on even the most hard-nosed visitor.

A sparkling little seven-year-old with pink ribbons in her hair and rouge on her cheeks runs out to grab my hand and lead me proudly through school classrooms where younger children are working.

She sits me down in a tiny chair and plunks herself in my lap until it's her turn to join the concert put on for the Canadians. The performance is bright and colorful and the children don't miss a beat as they dance, sing and pantomime through routines which praise the working people and the Thought of Chairman Mao.

The concert complete, my affectionate friend rushes back to hold my hand, walk me to the gate, hug me farewell and say "good-bye" in careful, timid English.

We meet strong, gentle women who are taking over leadership roles at the local level in communes and housing areas. Peer group pressure rather than law seems to control communities and women appear to be the guiding force in local decision-making.

A woman who leads the revolutioanry committee in a northern housing area tells us it has not been easy to fight the traditional role of women in Chinese society but they have the indisputable weight of Chairman Mao on their side.

They took Mao's thought on equality to heart, conducted criticism meetings and attacked "the fallacious idea that men are superior and women inferior." With the mighty Chairman to support them the women in the area forged ahead to build a new community and it seems nothing can hold them back now.

In a small home in Shanghai, a wise, soft-spoken elderly gentleman, who lived in the gutter before the communist liberation, tells his simple version of the revolution.

"I believed in Buddha in the old society because I heard we suffered because our destiny was bad. I hoped that by worshipping Buddha I would be able to maintain my job and improve our destiny.

"But after liberation I gave up worshipping and now more people in my family have jobs than ever before."

We leave China. The train begins its journey through Hong Kong and immediately we see the end of neat, manicured fields where every square foot of land is used. In China we never lost sight of people wherever we went from the far, frozen north to the southern tropics. Here the fields are left vacant and there is no one in sight.

As we get closer to the city we begin to see cars — not one standard brand of Chinese car, but Mercedes-Benz's, Volkswagens and Datsuns. We see run-down shacks, much poorer than we've seen in two weeks, and then we see skyscrapers and concrete that we haven't seen since our stop-over in Tokyo.

We see neon signs, large advertisements and finally the familiar Coca-Cola ad and we know China is behind us—we're on our way home.

Chinese N-Tests: 'Put Pressure On'

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

Canada is the one country in the world now in a position to do something serious about China's stubborn refusal to stop testing nuclear weapons in the atmosphere.

Now that France has agreed to conduct all future nuclear tests underground, there is only one country in the world still testing in the atmosphere. The result of these tests is simple and deadly. Every time China blasts off another bomb at Lop Nor — its testing site — a wave of radiation fans out across the world, dusting us all ever so lightly with death.

The tests at Lop Nor take only a matter of days to sweep over Japan, cross the Pacific, and pass silently and invisibly through the atmosphere of British Columbia and the rest of Canada.

The case against nuclear testing in the atmosphere has been made repeatedly. No one can fail to understand it any longer.

When the fallout from Lop Nor hits the coast, each of us is personally violated. Someone might as well be firing a giant ray-gun at us, for the radiation passes directly through our bodies, causing a minute—but significant — change in our genes. However slight, the radiation always has an effect.

It might take 10 years for the change to surface in one cancerous form or another. It might take 40 years. It might take a century. But in a very real way — medically, biologically, scientifically — these wavelengths of death weaken our basic genetic structure.

Every time China blows off another atomic bomb, I find myself, and my friends and my children, being silently zapped with radioactive poison. It doesn't matter how often our public medical officers tell us that these levels of radiation are "harmless," the fact is that there is no such thing as harmless radiation. It has already been established that long-range damage to human reproductive systems has been caused by fallout.

Recognizing this, Russia and the U.S. have long since put their tests underground. France has joined them. Even India, when it fired its first nuclear bomb this summer, had the human grace to put the loathsome thing down deep in the earth.

To continue to test nuclear weapons in the atmosphere is a crime against the whole human race. If the tests had no effect beyond the border, it might be considered each nation's business what they tested and what they didn't. But the reality is that any nuclear test anywhere in the atmosphere of the planet has an effect on all of us.

It astonishes me that China continues to carry on these tests. To plead poverty, to suggest that they can't "afford" to conduct the tests underground, is an unacceptable story. India could afford to do it underground. Surely China is not "poorer" than India?

I find it depressing that Canada, which has made so many excellent speeches about the harmful effects of radiation, has not yet bothered to discuss the matter with the Chinese themselves, and has not once raised the question of China's continued tests at the United Nations.

It is, of course, equally depressing that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau apparently forgot the whole matter while he had Chairman Mao's ear. And it is disappointing that Premier David Barrett was too worried about hustling forest products to dare to broach the topic while travelling through China last month.

Canadians, as everyone must know by now, are viewed with special affection in China, simply because one Canadian — Norman Bethune — volunteered himself as a doctor working with Mao Tse-tung's forces before the revolution. Bethune is regarded today as one of the heroes of the revolution, revered by schoolchildren and workers alike. So far as I know, he is the only non-Chinese to be accorded that kind of honor.

In China's collective mind, Bethune is nearly a mythical figure. As a result, Canadians by and large are viewed with friendliness, even a certain degree of brotherliness. I think, therefore, that we have a special responsibility at this moment in history. If there is any outside voice to which the Chinese are likely to respond, it is Canada's.

The important thing to remember about Norman Bethune was not whether he was a Communist, but that he was a doctor. If he had somehow survived the battlefield, it would be interesting to ask him for his views about nuclear radiation. As a doctor, he could not possibly have approved of any weapons program that indiscriminately poured nuclear material into the earth's atmosphere and into our bones and genes.

In this context, it becomes clear what Canada should do. We should be asking for the return of Dr. Bethune's body to his homeland, on the grounds that so long as the Chinese continue to test nuclear weapons in the atmosphere, they do not deserve to keep his remains.

If Canada were to seriously ask that Dr. Bethune's body be handed over to be returned to his homeland, the Chinese would find it difficult to ignore the point. If any single diplomatic move could be made to stir China's conscience, it would surely be this one. At the very least, it would bring world attention to bear on China's continued tests and generate an international debate. It might even cause some soul-searching in Peking.

Under the circumstances, I don't see how the Chinese could be "indignant" or "outraged." If anybody has the right to be indignant and outraged, it is those of us who must submit passively to the waves of radiation that China unleashes with each new test at Lop Nor. It is a form of "nuclear imperialism."

I don't know how well Norman Bethune rests in his grave at Shilchiachung, deep in the North China plains. But so long as China continues to detonate nuclear bombs in the atmosphere, his sleep cannot be peaceful. He should be brought back to Canada.

CANADIAN-BORN SURGEON Dr. Norman Bethune treating Chinese soldiers on battlefield during Chinese-Japanese war in 1938. Hunter suggests Canada should demand return of his body until China ends nuclear tests in atmosphere.

SIU Storm Rages On

OTTAWA (CP)—Charges and countercharges continued to fly Tuesday in the storm surrounding the powerful Seafarers' International Union and federal and provincial politicians.

In the capital, Labor Minister John Munro made another attempt to untangle the web of innuendo that surrounds him, Liberal party money managers said they kept SIU money from reaching Finance Minister John Turner and the attorney-general of Ontario said he will not allow the SIU to prosecute a member of the provincial legislature.

In British Columbia, meanwhile, a former judge who once investigated the Canadian shipping industry said trustees appointed to watch the union in the early 1960s were not tough enough.

Munro, who became the focal point of the SIU storm when it was alleged—and later disproved—that he solicited campaign funds from the union, took issue in the Commons about an exchange that occurred Monday in the Ontario legislature.

The labor minister said the exchange between Solicitor-General George Kerr and Stephen Lewis, leader of the provincial New Democratic party, demonstrated how misinformation can be dangerous.

Lewis asked Kerr on what grounds he was asking for a royal commission to investigate the SIU, as reported in a Toronto newspaper.

Kerr replied that there was "some exaggeration to the story" and said the Ontario government is not "demanding a probe." He said he told the reporter that his department had been asked in a letter from federal Justice Minister Otto Lang if there was any reason to call a public inquiry.

He said a reply would be made later this week and, while he had no objection to tabling copies of the letters, he thought he first should ask the federal auhorities involved.

Munro, in raising the exchange in the Commons, said it suggests the MPs "have been basing some of their interventions in this House on misinformation."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, who has been leading off the daily question period for several days with shots at Munro's alleged links with the SIU, rejected the minister's contention.

"At no time have I based any interventions . . . on any assumption that the Ontario government has asked for an investigation by the federal government," he said.

The exchange ground to a halt when Commons Speaker James Jerome (L-Sudbury) agreed with a suggestion by NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) that Munro had no point of privilege and the matter should be dropped.

The disclosure that the SIU tried to donate $200 to Turner's campaign before the July 8 election came from Senator John Godfrey, chairman of the Liberals' national finance committee since 1968.

Senator Godfrey said his political instincts told him to turn back the cheque, dated June 18 and signed by SIU president Roman Gralewicz.

PURSE OPENS WIDER

OTTAWA (CP) — Supplementary estimates bringing the government's authorized 1974-75 spending to almsot $26 bill got final Commons approval Tuesday night.

The $1.749 billion approved represented the largest supplementary estimates since the Second World War.

There was no recorded vote on the estimates, which cover payments to the provinces, aditional subsidies on beef and milk, Local Iniatives Program (LIP) grants and a wide variety of other items.

The largest single item is $315 million in payments to the provinces. Of that, $112.5 million is oil tax money collected by Ottawa for Alberta and Saskatchewan, while $202.5 million is for payments to poorer provinces under an agreement to increase their revenue.

PM Aware Of Spy's Background

OTTAWA (CP)—Authorities know that the Soviet attache to the 1976 Olympics in Montreal was expelled from Britain for spying activities, Prime Minister Trudeau said in the commons Tuesday.

Replying to questions from Otto Jelinek (PC—Toronto-High Park-Humber Valley), the prime minster said both the RCMP and the external affairs department are aware of the background of Alexander Gesko, 37.

Gresko was in Canada last month, and had his picture taken with the Prime Minister, Gresko, international relations committee vice-president for the Soviet Ministry of Sport, was expelled from Britain in 1971.

Conflict Guidelines Bid For Ministers Defeated

OTTAWA (CP) — An Opposition attempt to have Parliament establish conflict-of-interest rules for cabinet ministers was defeated in the Commons Tuesday night.

The vote was 114 to 95 against a motion by Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield. It would have had the Commons privileges committee study conflict of interest and make recommendations dealing with cabinet ministers.

The motion was an amendment to Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp's motion to have the committee deal with conflict-of-interest recommendations for MPs before going on to ministers and public servants.

This was approved in a voice vote after the opposition realized the Liberal majority in the 264-seat House could not be overcome.

The 114 Liberals in the house for the vote lined up against 76 Conservatives, 11 New Democrats, seven Social Credit members and the lone independent, Leonard Jones of Moncton.

The privileges committee now will study a green paper on conflict of interest, prepared in July, 1973.

"The government is simply indulging in games . . . designed to bury the question of conflict of interest for many months."

It's absurd to implement rules for MPs first because cabinet posts are especially sensitive to possible conflicts of interest, he said.

Stanfield said Prime Minister Trudeau's apparent attitude that his cabinet is a "kind of nobility" subject only to self-imposed controls is pitiful.

Saanich Home Freeze Thaws

The first step toward lifting the building freeze in the Robinwood-Majestic area of Saanich may be made Monday, paving the way for 75 new building lots.

A building freeze was clamped on properties between Robinwood and Columbia on the north side of Kenmore, leading north and including properties fronting on Hawthorne after a severe flooding problem in 1972.

The public works committee Tuesday endorsed municipal engineer Cliff Warren's recommendation that council initiative local improvement plans to extend water mains and improve roadwork on Agnew between Robinwood and Columbia, Prairie between Majestic and Columbia, Dougall from Majestic to Columbia, and Prairie from Robinwood to Majestic.

Warren said drainage facilities for the Robinwood-Majestic area are to be finished early in 1975.

If the recommended improvements are carried out, Warren siad, 75 building lots could be created in the area.

In other business, the committee approved several items under Saanich's cost-sharing policy for installation of oversize drains, roads, water mains and link fences. They are:

— $3020.28 for storm drains in the Ash-Edgemont subdivision.

— $2,233.95 for storm drains and $2,050 for a link fence in the Phyllis subdivision.

Shelbourne Parking Cut Seen

Saanich council is expected to rule Monday that no parking will be allowed anytime on Shelbourne between North Dairy and Feltham.

The public works committee, with the exception of Ald. Mel Couvelier, agreed Tuesday with municipal engineer Cliff Warren the ban is necessary.

Warren said, "There is a high degree of accident frequency on the road" and quoted using traffic figures as one reason.

He said recent counts showed daily northbound traffic averaged 8,900 vehicles and southbound, 9,600.

He agreed with chairman Ald. Sandy Noel that the widening of the west side of Shelbourne is "a top priority" for 1975.

Couvelier said it is essential to keep the single-family homes on Shelbourne in order to preserve "a certain character".

WATER BILL PROBE TO TRACE 'LEAKS'

Is Saanich picking up some of the tab for water used by residents in the other core municipalities?

This was the question asked Tuesday when the public works committee agreed with municipal engineer Cliff Warren that Underwood, McLellan and Associates Ltd. should be paid $15,000 to carry out a study on Saanich's water distribution system.

Warren said one of the study's benefits would be to trace sources of leaks, adding about 18 per cent of water is lost and unbilled.

He explained that, unlike the other municipalities served by the Greater Victoria Water District, Saanich had no meters. It had been the practice, he explained, to bill Sanich for the amount not metered by the other participating municipalities.

"Would it be right to check Oak Bay's meters and see if they are on the low side?" chairman Ald. Sandy Noel asked.

"We could be paying for any leakages that may be on the Greater Victoria system," Ald. Les Passmore observed.

"We had a credit one year," assistant engineer George Gunn told the committee.

Gunn agreed with Warren the study would concentrate on areas "that are suspect" and help the municipality enforce pressure testing on developers of new subdivisons. Gunn said one subdivision alone had been found to have six breaks in the line.

Warren said Saanich's reservoirs are suspected to be the cause of much of the leakage.

"We should be studying them, particularly the Rithet reservoir," he said," and old steel mains could also be adding to the problem."

Warren said once the study was made it could be easily updated every five years at minimal cost.

Fire Report May Spark Esquimalt Change

It is one of the peculiarities of the Municipal Act that municipalities aren't compelled to have fire departments.

The act merely says municipalities may supply fire protection services . . . it doesn't say that they must.

Thus there are communities where fire protection is not provided as a separate service. Such is the case in Esquimalt; police officers work double duty as firemen.

Now this may all change as a two-man commission sets about gathering information on firefighting services in the province.

Initiated in October under contract to the attorney-general's department, the inquiry is being conducted by Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, assisted by Colin Evans.

Dr. Keenleyside said in an interview the responsibilities of municipalities to provide fire protection vis-a-vis the Municipal Act will be scrutinized.

But he was not prepared to divulge what his recommendation will be.

That will come in his final report to attorney-general Alex Macdonald, expected to be submitted the end of January.

For the past month Keenleyside and Evans have been touring the province talking to fire chiefs and personnel. Fifteen meetings have been held on Vancouver Island, north and central B.C. and the Fraser Valley and Lower Mainland.

The commissioners hope to wrap up their tour with visits to the Okanagan and Kootenays early next month.

When they are finished they will have talked with every fire chief in the province, involving more than 100 fire departments.

Keenleyside, former co-chairman of B.C. Hydro explained the inquiry is attempting to determine souces of dissatisfaction with the provincial firefighting services as well as ideas for solutions to existing problems.

"Most of the people we have talked to have said the provincial government should be more aware of firefighting problems than has been the case over the past 50 years," he said.

CBC Bribes Charged

OTTAWA (CP) — Social Credit Leader Real Caouette accused Parliamentary Press Gallery reporters Tuesday of taking bribes to publish or broadcast news stories on politicians.

He named the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. when he made the allegation in the Commons, a charge immediately denied by CBC spokesman in Toronto.

Hoowever, Caouette said later that other television and newspaper reporters do the same thing. He refused to name individuals or organizations other than the CBC.

In one instance, he said he saw a politician put money into the jacket pocket of a reporter in a corridor of the Centre Block on Parliament Hill.

"It happens. I have seen it with my own eyes."

The charge was denied by spokesmen for both the English and French CBC parliamentary operations.

Meanwhile, a reporter for the French service of The Canadian Press, the national news-gathering co-operative, said she was offered a $10 bribe by a Scoial Credit MP in the last Parliament.

Caouette refused repeatedly to name any individuals or organizations, other than his Commons reference to the CBC, when questioned by reporters.

He said the reporters involved work for both English and French media outlets and are not restricted to news organizations in Quebec.

But when pressed for details, he said he has witnessed only one incident. He could not say how much money was given, but said it was placed by a politician in the pocket of the reporter involved.

He would not say outside when the incident had occurred.

In Toronto, Mike Daigneault, CBC-TV news editor, said he believed Caouette's charges were "completely unfounded."

"If he has information that reporters are taking bribes, let him either name the reporter publicly or give the names to employers and action can be taken against them."

Condominium Halt Levied

Esquimalt council has again put a moratorium on conversion of apartments to condominiums, and will only review the order if the rental unit vacancy rate rises to three per cent.

The last Statistics Canada reported showed the Victoria area to have a vacancy rate of less than one per cent.

Council has had a number of applications for conversion in the past few months after recently deciding to drop the moratorium.

At this week's council meeting three applications were rejected for registration of existing duplexes under the Strata Titles Act, which would have allowed their owners to sell them as condominiums.

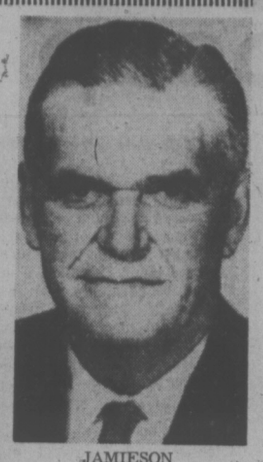
NOBODY LIT A GAS WELL

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — Ken Jamieson remembers an evening as a young boy when his father took him to a gala welcome for a visiting celebrity.

"At the big moment, someone put a torch to the gas well, sending a tremendous flare into the night and almost scaring me to death. I assured myself I'll never have anything to do with oil and gas."



JAMIESON
. . . changed mind

Today J. K. Jamieson is chairman and chief executive officer of Exxon Corp. of New York, the world's largest oil company. When he returned recently for a one-day visit to his home town nobody lit a gas well to welcome him, nor did he expect it. In the old days, he told the Medicine Hat Chamber of Commerce, "natural gas seemed worth only a little more than air."

"Your natural gas has become more useful and more precious . . . so now I take a professional interest in your natural gas."

John Kenneth Jamieson was born in Medicine Hat Aug. 28, 1910. He spent his first six years in the southeastern Alberta city, described by Rudyard Kipling as having "all hell for a basement" because of its natural gas reserves.

As a young boy, he travelled widely with his father, a CP Rail engineer who worked in Cranbrook, Medicine Hat, Ignace, Ont., Kenora, Ont., Vancouver Edmonton, Lethbridge, Brandon, Calgary and Saskatoon.

Ken Jamieson studied civil engineering at the University of Alberta and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, graduating in 1931.

He finished his education to step into the depression "when demand for civil engineers just about died," and took the first job that came his way: straightening tracks on the CPR and prospecting for gold.

He didn't find any gold and in 1932 answered to an advertisement that started his oil career, working for a small refinery at Coutts, Alta., operated by the now-defunct Northwest Stellarene Co. of Alberta.

He joined British American Oil Co. in 1934 when it acquired Northwest Stellarene, and later rose to the position of manager of its Moose Jaw refinery.

T. A. Richardson Brokerage Firm Taken Over by Bongard Leslie

By AL FORREST

Bongard Leslie and Col Ltd. has taken over the stock brokerage firm of T. A. Richardson, spokesmen for both companies have announced.

However, the new office will be in the T. A. Richardson space at suite 900, 1175 Douglas.

The Victoria office will have a combined staff of 10, with four from Bongard Leslie and six from Richardson.

T. A. Richardson is not associated with Richardson Securities of Canada, which continues it business in Victoria.

Yorke said the take-over of T. A. Richardson was part of the trend sweeping the brokerage industry and, while a symptom of the tough period the market was going through, was also an expression of faith in the future.

He predicted a large number of other take-overs and mergers would be announced shortly.

He said companies have come to realize they must be large to finance the new electronic equipment in the stock industry in order to provide better service.

The day of the small brokerage firm is rapidly coming to a close.

He said Bongard Leslie is planning a complete overhaul in its electric equipment and the merger was an important first step in making this possible.

A larger company also increases the staff available for research, he said.

The stock industry was becoming more complex all the time because of increasing interest in commodity trading, especially gold.

This was once just a sideline but is moving into the centre of the trading system. There is also more trading in the United States market and this requires a greater knowledge of international events.

He predicted that brokerage firms would be bigger and more aggressive in 1975 — but fewer in number. By aggressive, he said, he meant they would be offering more services to the investing public.

"The industry is going through a rough period now, there's no question about that. But I believe the market will improve sooner than a lot of people think," Yorke said.

"If we didn't think so, we wouldn't be expanding our operations."

U.S. Crime Cost $137 Per Adult

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States businesses — and eventually their customers — will lose an estimated $20.3 billion because of crimes this year, equal to $137 for every adult in the country, the commerce department reported today.

The total U.S. loss last year was $15.7 billion, including losses from such crimes as shoplifting, burglary, vandalism, bad cheques and employee theft.

The cost of crime-prevention measures by business was estimated at $3.9 billion.

The commerce department noted in a special report on business crime that most businesses absorb little of their crime losses, passing them along instead as higher prices for their goods

Retailers, especially department and clothing stores, will suffer the biggest crime loss this year, an estimated $5.8 billion, the report said.

Service companies will have losses of $3.5 billion, and manufacturers $2.8 billion.

The department said between 31 per cent and 61 per cent of the commercial establishments in the largest American cities suffered burglary attempts in 1972, and 72 per cent of all retail stores in Detroit were burglarized that year.

It said shoplifting accounted for 28 per cent of crimes against retail stores, followed by: burglaries, 23 per cent; vandalism, 20 per cent; bad cheques 13 per cent; employee theft, 13 per cent; and robbery, three per cent.

The report indicated that retailers may be placing too little emphasis on theft within stores.

It cited problems from such employee crimes as underrecording prices on cash registers, personal favors given to friends, theft from shipping departments, padded payrolls and accounting fraud, and kickbacks to buyers.

Economists in Alphabet Soup

By HOBART ROWEN

WASHINGTON (WP) — U.S. economists are playing a new alphabet game in discussing the recession.

Paul W. McCracken, Michigan University economist and friend of President Ford, started it all a few weeks ago by predicting the economy would experience a "V-shaped" recession.

That means the economy would suffer a quick, sharp drop in production, accompanied by a loss of jobs, but then recover just as sharply as both businessmen and consumers regain their confidence.

Given the rapid deterioration of the economic outlook in the last few weeks, McCracken's scenario has to be rated relatively optimistic. Some of the less sanguine experts look instead for a "U-shaped" decline, in which the economy would stay depressed for longer than McCracken had in mind, and then recover slowly, and perhaps not all the way.

A more serious view is elaborated by Henry Kaufman of Salomon Bros., the New York investment brokers, and Maurice Mann, president of the San Francisco Home Loan Bank Board.

Kaufman and Mann are betting on an "L-shaped" recession, in which the economy takes a quick plunge, straight down, and then stays depressed for a protracted period. How long might that be? They won't hazard a guess. "The American economy is in full retreat," says Kaufman.

In Wall Street, there is talk of a "W-shaped" stock market, in which a sharp selloff was followed first by a modest recovery, then a new slump (now taking place), to be followed by a second stage of recovery. But no one wants to guess how far down the current slide will take the averages.

The administration economists don't care much for this alphabet game. Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, concedes the recession could be lengthy; but he's not yet ready to acknowledge that it will go as deep as Kaufman and Mann and others predict.

There are indications, for the first time, of deepening concern at the Federal Reserve Board, which in the past few days has accelerated its move to easier money, driving the key federal funds interest rate — over 13 per cent in July — to under nine per cent.

So far, the Ford Administration hasn't changed its anti-inflation posture, although it has modified its rhetoric to give the anti-recession fight equal billing.

Greenspan's willingness to reject the need for dramatic action to fight unemployment, even when his own diagnosis is for an economy "slipping rather perceptibly" is based on the contention that high unemployment rates don't have the same meaning they did 10 or 20 years ago.

In technical terms, Greenspan says that the "Phillips curve," which is supposed to spell out a relationship between unemployment and inflation, has swung "to the right."

Translated, that means that the cost of reducing the jobless rate to the low levels which used to be set as goals — say three per cent to four per cent — would be unacceptably high rates of inflation.

Moreover, Greenspan argues that the higher levels of unemployment the U.S. now faces — say, seven per cent or more — do not imply the degree of hardship for the individual nor pain for the economy that they once did.

Among the reasons he cites are the rise in private and public unemployment benefits, the increase in the average worker's health, the greater availability of credit and the fact that many families have more than one jobholder.

Therefore, Greenspan, supported by Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, contends that the old tactic of pumping up the economy is premature. At some point, however, if inflation recedes, then an expansionary program would create real new demand and new jobs, and would then be justified. But not now, while inflation is raging.

Greenspan is highly admired by his liberal economist friends, but they violently disagree with him. Economists like Arthur M. Okum, Walter W. Heller, and George Peerry contend that Greenspan's scenario would depress the economy for years, with high unemployment, before a recovery can take place.

Is U.S. in Recession? Yes, All Indicators Say

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The argument over whether the U.S. is in a recession was put to final rest by November's economic statistics. It is.

The White House joined economists in and out of government in agreeing that a recession exists, and the dispute shifted to how severe it is likely to be. Some economists said it will be the longest of the post-war era.

Unemployment in November reached its highest level in 13 years. On the brighter side, the first faint signs that inflation may be abating became visible.

Reports on the economy stream from the government almost daily. To give the full pictures of the tugs and tendencies, here is UPI's box-score of the latest U.S. reports:

Unemployment: Joblessness rose in November to its highest level since 1961. The unemployment rate of 6.5 per cent was sharply up from October's 6 per cent. For the first time this year, total employment declined. The number of jobless reached nearly 3 million. Since October, 1973, the unemployment rate has increased nearly 40 per cent and the number of unemployed by 1.9 million.

Inflation: The consumer price index increased by nine-tenths of 1 per cent in October, the latest month for which figures are available. But the increase for non-food products was six-tenths of 1 per cent, only half as much as the average monthly increase during the first nine months of this year. But October food prices rose at a seasonally adjusted rate of 1.3 per cent — normally the food index declines in October. For the year, the index stood at 12.2 per cent over October, 1973. The index showed prices have risen 53.2 per cent since 1967.

Real spendable earnings: With inflation wrung out statistically, take-home pay measured in buying power fell 4.9 per cent from a year ago.

Profits: Corporate profits, adjusted to eliminate the effects of inflation on the value of inventories, rose by $1.1 billion during the third quarter of this year.

Wholesale prices: Indicating some relocation of inflationary pressures, wholesale prices of industrial commodities rose only 1.1 per cent in October. Along with September's rise of 1 per cent, the increase was the smallest for a two-month period in a year despite increases in auto prices. However, food prices continued their ascent, rising 4.7 per cent in October. For the year, the wholesale index rose 22.6 per cent.

Sales: Total sales of manufacturing wholesale and retail businesses fell by three-tenths of 1 per cent in September, another reflection of the recession. The drop was the first since last December.

Productivity: Revised figures showed output per man-hour fell at an annual rate of 2.4 per cent during the third quarter of 1974. This was the fifth drop in the last six quarters. Unit labor costs — the costs for labor for each unit of production — rose at an annual rate of 13.1 per cent in the third quarter.

Output: The output of factories, mines and utilities fell six-tenths of 1 per cent in October, the first dropoff since last winter's oil boycott.

Demand Reverses Mine Tradition

By LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The dwindling supplies and skyrocketing costs of raw materials are creating a curious economic reversal in the world. They also are stimulating interest in the economics and technology of mining.

Chairman Gabriel Hauge of Manufacturers Hanover Corp., the New York bank holding company, noted the economic reversal recently. He said competition for sources of materials is starting to replace competition for markets in the world.

"The frozen wealth of Siberia may be developed by resource hungry Japanese and American capital," Hauge said. "Importers of raw materials are exporting processing plants and factories to sources of cheaper materials, cheaper energy and less rigorous ideas about environmental problems."

Emory Ayers, a management consultant who works in the mining field, said there is a tremendous interest now in reopening mines closed years ago because "seat of the pants" operators could no longer run them profitably. Ayers was talking specifically about metal mines but the same thing is true in coal mining — even though the cost of opening or reopening a coal mine has increased dramatically in recent years.

Jarvis Cecil, a vice president of Consolidation Coal would cost $55 million today to open a new coal mine in West Virginia that might have cost $15 million to open in the mid-1960s.

But Ayers' principal point was that, with the exception of a few big companies, metal mining is economically a backward industry even though its scientific technology generally is good. He insisted there are shutdown metal mines all over North America that could be operated profitably if their owners had the economic information and sound management techniques to match the available mining technology.

"The metal mining industry," he said, "has been extremely slow to apply modern managerial tools. One reason for this is that most management consultants and most highly trained business executives have a distaste for mining.

"You cannot run a mine thousands of miles away successfully sitting behind a desk in New York," he said. "You have to visit the mine frequently and may have to take your family to live there for considerable periods, cut off from all the usual comforts and pleasures of civilization."

As a result of this remote control operation, mining companies tend to be resistant to new business ideas, he said, although not to new technology for extracting and processing ore.

A simple example of this, Ayers said, is that the mini-computer which now does so many things in so many industries, is hardly known in the mining world.

He said the mini-computer could be put to work easily at the mine site since its use doesn't involve expensive and often unreliable transmission of data over a long distance to a central computer. It would give the mine management people data on which to base truly intelligent business decisions. the blunt fact, Ayers said, is that mining companies, especially smaller companies, usually don't have any information of their business to enable them to make intelligent business decisions.

"The executives don't even look on themselves as businessmen — only as mining men," Ayers said.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The Prince George Liberal Association is planning an intensive study of nothern British Columbia to formulate party policy for the next provincial election.

WASHINGTON EXPORTS UP

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Two-way trade through Washington ports during the first nine months of 1974 totalled $6.1 billion, the state department of commerce and economic development reports.

That represents a 41.9 per cent increase over the same period a year ago, Wayne Gentry, executive director of the trade development division, said.

Exports accounted for $3.1 billion of the total, up 19.4 per cent. Imports totalled $3 billion, a 76.5 per cent increase.

Gentry said, however, that the high rate of inflation raises the possibility that Washington may experience a trade deficit this year for the first time in recent history.

Aircraft, logs and wheat accounted for 44 per cent of all exports, Gentry said.

Housing Groups to Tour Empty Homes

Three Victoria housing organizations will tour 12 vacant houses in Saanich today to determine whether they can salvage them from the provincial government.

Representatives from House Savers, Victoria Rental Aid Service and James Bay Non-Profit Housing Society, met Highways Minister Graham Lea Tuesday and were invited to view the houses, which stand in a one-block area of Saanich, between Tolmie and Shamrock

Five of the houses, purchased by the highways department for the right-of-way construction, have been open for tenders but no purchase bids have been received. The other seven, owned by public works, have not yet been put out for tender.

All 12 houses are vacant and some have been empty for several months. They were purchased by the government, pending construction of a tunnel to connect Blanshard Street with the Trans-Canada Highway.

Opposition members have charged it is "disgraceful" that houses would lie vacant at a time when Victoria is facing a severe housing shortage.

Lea said Tuesday House savers, a federally-supported project, will look at the houses with a view to dismantling them and to recycling materials and lumber as they have done with other old homes in Victoria.

The James Bay group will be looking at the houses to see if they are suitable for moving to other lots (if lots are available to the group), said Lea, and the rental aid group will see if any are habitable as they now stand.

If any are abitable, the rental group could "maybe" take over responsibility for them, said Lea, and insure that any tenants move out when construction of the Blanshard Street extension begins.

If any of the three groups decides to undertake action on the houses, bids would have to be submitted, however.

PREMIUMS UP 23%

TORONTO (CP) — Homeowners across Canada can expect to pay an average 23.1 per cent more for annual insurance premiums early in 1975, a report released Monday by the Insurers Advisory Organization of Canada (IAO) show.

The IAO is the rate-making organization of companies and groups handling about 50 per cent of the dwelling insurance in Canada.

The increases range between 11 per cent in southern Ontario and 75 per cent in New Brunswick.

Premiums will increase up to 21 per cent in Quebec, 63 per cent in Manitoba, 66 per cent in Saskatchewan, 24 per cent in Alberta, 41 per cent in Northern Ontario, and up to 23 per cent in Northwestern Ontario, the report says.

No figures were available for B.C.

The IAO expects it will take two weeks to a month to work out the individual dwelling insurance premium increases and distribute the new rating schedules to their agents across Canada.

IAO president E. F. Belton attributes the increases primarily to the effects of inflation, because the cost of claims continue to rise relative to premiums in an already under-insured sector.

Board to Abolish 'Unfair' School Fees

A plan to drop fees for non-resident students in Greater Victoria schools got the support of the school board's business committee Tuesday.

Trustees were told the non-resident fees catch only those honest people who admit they're from outside the city, not all those who don't bother to declare it.

"For every honest person I'm quite sure there are four or five dishonest persons," said Colin Glover, assistant superintendent of schools — business.

"We know this is unfair."

The board will vote on abolition of fees at its meeting Monday.

In the construction and maintenance committee, trustees agreed to recommend to the board approval of sketch plans for the new Torquay Drive elementary school.

"You've designed a facility for the depression, and it's the most depressed looking school we've built," board chairman Peter Bunn told school district architect Dennis Roberts.

The education department is allowing only $31 per square foot in construction costs, so the 12-classroom building will be done as economically as possible.

The committee reached no agreement on a proposal to build tennis courts next to Oak Bay junior secondary school and Willows elementary school in co-operation with Oak Bay municipality.

Trustee William Ross objected to the board agreeing to help pay for construction and operation of the six courts at Willows, when at Macaulay school Esquimalt municipality has built courts and maintained them at no cost to the board.

The issue will be discussed again at the board meeting.

COLLEGE BUDGET STAYS

Any ideas Greater Victoria school board turstees had of rejecting Camosun College's 1975 budget were scotched Tuesday.

Even if the board refuses to pass Camosun's budget, Education Minister Eileen Dailly has the final say on the matter and can overrule the board, secretary-treasurer Ernie Shaw told trustees.

"This is crassly stupid, is it not?" complained board chairman Peter Bunn, who had raised the possibility of rejecting the $7.8 million college budget.

"We have this scotched on to the top of our budget and we have no control whatsoever."

The college budget appears as one section of the school board's final budget.

Camosun College council passed its budget, a 58 per cent increase over the 1974 budget, last week without cutting it.

Without the college budget added, the school board's 1975 operating budget is already $34.4 million, compared with $29 million this year.

Bennett Calls for Probe On BCR 'NDP Hacks'

Opposition leader Bill Bennett called Tuesday for an independent commission of inquiry into infiltration of B.C. Railway management by "NDP political hacks."

The call came in an 11-page report on the BCR strike, prepared by a "task force" of three Socred MLAs.

Besides painting a gloomy picture of the B.C. economy and the social and economic effects of the three-week-old strike, the report charges that rank and file employees of the railway have lost confidence in its management because of "replacement of railway men with NDP political hacks in position after position."

"As a consequence of this strike, we must recognize that the political nature of the administration of the B.C. Railway by the NDP government threatens to end the professionalism and competency developed among the B.C. Railway labor and management over a number of years," said the report.

The report recommends immediate appointment of an industrial inquiry commission into the dispute. Labor Minister Bill King has the power to make the appointment on his own, without approval of both sides, said the report, despite King's contention that the Labor Code demands a request from both sides first.

Operations of the railway should be considered an essential service, said the report, and as such King should act immediately to bring together both sides in the dispute.

Establishment of a supply relief program for remote communities along the rail line is also recommended by the report.

In studying the effects of the strike, thus far, the report predicts that "a virtual shutdown of the forest industry will occur" if the impasse continues into January.

Sawmill operations have already been distressed by the slump in the lumber market and now, said the report, "the two buoyant segments of the forest economy — pulp production and chip production for pulp mills are threatened."

According to the Socreds, chips cannot be economically moved with the railway, and pulp mills are lacking large storage space to stockpile production.

"It is our opinion that unemployment in B.C. will approach 10 per cent in February or March under normal conditions with respect to B.C. Railway operations. If this strike continues that long, unemployment in B.C. could be substantially higher than 10 per cent."

The three MLAs — Don Phillips (South Peace River), Alex Fraser (Cariboo) and Ed Smith (North Peace River) — travelled up and down the rail line during the past week and talked to both striking and non-striking employees.

They said many employees, particularly those in Squamish and Williams Lake believe the railway will be closed down well into 1975, perhaps as late as March.

SCRAP PAPER SALVAGE SCRAPPED

OTTAWA (CP)—The capital's scrap paper salvage program appears headed for the scrap heap.

Unable to find a buyer in Canada or abroad for 900 tons of paper collected by city garbagemen, board of control has decided to end the program.

But environment commissioner James MacKenzie has not given up yet. He recommended the city keep the 900 tons on hand in the hope of selling it later.

Gov't Blamed in Housing Lack

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chairman of the Bank of B.C. Tuesday said the province is unable to supply the housing needs of its citizens and faulted the provincial government for the situation.

Albert E. Hall, who is also chief executive officer of the bank, told the bank's annual meeting that fears of profit-killing legislation might frighten away investors in other areas, resulting in a deterioration of the province's general investment base.

He said that federal legislation about three years ago substantially lowered the attractiveness of investment in rental housing, although it was still a viable operation.

"At this point the only kind of reasonable provincial action would have been some program to stimulate construction," Hall said.

"Instead rent controls were introduced and since then construction of privately financed rental housing became virtually non-existent."

He said the provincial NDP government should be concerned with solutions to long-term problems.

"Treating the symptom of rising rents, instead of encouraging building, aggravated the problem of shortages in rental housing," he said.

In Victoria, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said he felt the government has turned the corner on the rental accommodation and housing problem.

He said the government will be going ahead with its housing program and likely will move as quickly as the housing industry is moving anywhere.

"I would think it (housing) would be a reasonably attractive field for private investment," he said.

62 Layoffs Planned

PRINCETON (CP) — Glen Martin, manager of the Similkameen Mines Co. Ltd., operating in this southern B.C. community, said Tuesday 62 hourly-rated employees will be laid off Jan. 1 because of low copper prices and increased costs of labor, materials and higher taxes.

Normally, the mine operates with between 250 and 300 workers, all members of the United Steelworkers of America.

This will be the second major staff cutback for Princeton. In October, Northwood Lumber Mills shut down its operations, putting several hundred loggers and mill workers out of work.

Feud Stymies Cable Bid

Victoria Times
WEDNESDAY, DEC. 11, 1974 15
SECOND SECTION

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Federal-provincial jealousy has stymied efforts of Greater Victoria school board to get into the cablevision field, trustees were told Tuesday.

The board wants a $20,000 study on the feasibility of buying or leasing an old cable from Victoria Cablevision.

The cable, which now connects all but two district schools, is becoming redundant as the cablevision firm completes a new city-wide hookup.

It could provide a closed-circuit cablevision system for the school district.

Superintendent of schools Jake Longmore told the board's legislation committee that the federal communications department has allocated $350 million to make similar studies across the country.

But the board's attempt to tap some of these funds has been held up at the provincial government level since March, Longmore said.

The hangup is the new provincial communications department, he said.

That department, just a year old, is "quite sincere in wanting to establish its jurisdiction," said Longmore.

It hasn't decided whether to let the federal government do the feasibility study, whether to do the study itself, or whether to defer the matter.

Longmore said a provincial communications official told him the school board was lucky to have two levels of government falling all over it trying to help.

"Mr. Chairman, they're falling in front of us and I have to climb over them," he said.

He said he's "horribly afraid" other provinces will beat British Columbia to get the federal funds while the federal-provincial jurisdiction dispute goes on.

Then "the province of B.C. will find itself as it did 15 years ago with vocational money, getting only the dregs."

The federal government at that time was offering the province funding for vocational schools.

Longmore said there is a "very active debate" going on between the B.C. government and Ottawa concerning jurisdiction over B.C. Telephone Co. and of cablevision.

Several trustees echoed his frustration.

"Are we really going to be prevented by the political ambitions of the provincial government from getting what is right for this community," asked Walter Donald.

Longmore met 10 days ago with Charles Dalfen, deputy minister of transport and communication, to again plead the board's case.

Dalfen told him it was his opinion that the study should be done by the provincial government.

The board is now waiting for a final answer from Dalfen.

No Charade Please!

Members of Victoria city council indicated Tuesday they aren't prepared to act out any "charade" to help publicize Oxfam's relief effort for the world's hungry and deprived.

In caucus session, they flatly rejected a proposal from local Oxfam official Kay Lines that the mayor and aldermen pose for publicity photographs "with an empty plate and a glass of water in front of you."

Lines said in a letter the object of the exercise would be to promote an "awareness fast" scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 19.

Mayor Peter Pollen advised council to decline the invitation as "inappropriate," and said for doing so he would probably "get ripped off by the press tomorrow."

Said Ald. Mike Young: "To set up a charade like this is patently ridiculous. This particular promotion doesn't lend itself to our support."

Pollen started to say: "Presumably this (the fast) will make the White Anglo-Saxons in our community feel . . ." but never finished the sentence.

Ald. Sam Bawlf said jokingly, however, that aldermen already had glasses of water in the committee room so all the photographer need do was "bring eight or nine plates to our regular caucus meeting."

"In-camera," added Ald. Bill Tindall.

Interim Parking On Park?

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government is still searching for property for its park-and-ride service and may have to use Cuthbert Holmes Park on the Trans-Canada Highway on an interim basis if other land isn't found soon.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said Tuesday the government is looking for "something more permanent" but may have to resort to using the parkland for the several hundred cars which will be left on the outskirts of town under the park-and-ride scheme.

The scheme, designed to eliminate several hundred parking spaces in the legislative precinct and to ease traffic at rush hour, would involve civil servants driving to one or more central parking lots where they would be taken to work on shuttle buses.

Service was expected to begin this fall but the government has run into problems acquiring parking areas and buses.

Lorimer said some of the new buses have arrived but others are being held up by strikes.

"The service will begin as soon as we get the buses," he said, adding that he hopes by that time to also have some new property purchased but if not part of the parkland on the corner of Burnside and the Trans-Canada Highway will be levelled and used as a parking lot.

B.C. Buys Downtown Property

The provincial government has purchased a nine-lot parcel of land in downtown Victoria for $723,000.

Included in the parcel are a car lot on Yates Street used by Speedway Motors, the former Gibson's Bowladrome and four lots on Johnson Street.

The car lot was purchased by the government recently for $263,000 and the other lafd was acquired last year for $460,000.

Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said the government "has no immediate plans" for the empty lots but is considering a mixed residential and commercial block with office space at the bottom and apartments at the top.

One lot next to the old bowladrome would likely be left for parking, he said.

The bowladrome itself has been undergoing extensive renovations for several months and the two floors of office space will eventually be used for the highways department and purchasing commission.

Hartley said the government "assembled the land quietly as part of the government's policy of acquiring land in the downtown area."

NECESSARY BUT . . .

'I Hate Cameras' Says Beny

max low

Sunlight so bright streams through the windows and you're certain that amid all the singing and stamping, death will come soon.

You are midway now between dry and dusty Tehran and the lush green of Babolsar, lying in its sticky humidity on the shore of the Caspian Sea.

But you're sure you'll never make it as the bus moves faster and faster on the narrow, winding road over the Alborz Mountains and the driver joins his fellow Iranian passengers in singing and stamping his feet and even managing to clap his hands a few times as the bus swings across to the wrong side of the road and they all laugh as you cover your eyes. Down in the valley below, two battered buses lie on their sides and the driver shows all his shiny white teeth as he grins beneath his moustache and gleefully points them out to you.

Many things are desperately serious in Iranian life — the Moslem religion with the wailing from the mosques, the sombre parades on holidays of mourning, and even the celebration of Now Ruz, the Persian New Year on March 21 — but, unfortunately, driving isn't one of them.

The Iranians take to the roads with a kind of gay abandon and hardly any driving knowledge and vie for what little space there is with donkeys laden with carrots and mandarin oranges and often with camel trains bringing wares from the tribes into the city bazaar. And they have no idea of how to count the number of seats in a car. A news item in the English-language daily paper Kayhan International will tell you with no hint of humor: "Injuries were suffered by 17 people when the Volkswagen Beetle they were riding in went out of control and rolled over."

I guess it was that little chat with Roloff Beny, when the famed Canadian artist-photographer was in Victoria recently, that started me thinking about one of my old haunts. Thinking about riding donkeys in the cool, clear air of the foothills to escape the heat of Tehran; about the little carpet-washing place at Chesh m'ali south of the city where men and women beat Persian rugs with a kind of gentle brutality, dunk them in the murky river waters and then sprawl them on the rocks to dry in the sun; and about the kind of Middle East corruption that upset the students at the Civil Aviation training school at Tehran's International Airport (where I taught English between sessions at Kayhan) when the school's director Dr. Hosseini collected money for their text books and the books never arrived. "Dr. Hosseini has eaten our money," they would say.

Beny lounged on a couch in a suite at the Empress, like a kind of Noel Coward of the photographic world, and talked of his work and himself. He is following his nine immaculately-produced but ultra-scenic works with a grand volume entitled "Persia: Bridge of Turquoise" and that's what got me excited. For Beny deals not so much with subjects but with moods, with seasons and with light and dark. And surely nowhere can there be such contrast as there is in the brilliant sunlight and blueness of the sky by day and the bright nearness of the Persian stars at night.

. . . "the conductor"

Some of Beny's work has been strongly criticized, particularly his latest book "Roloff Beny in Italy," for the lack of people in his pictures. But there is no denying he is brilliant in the artistic sense and his Canadian book "To Every Thing There is a Season" sold 45,000 copies in this country alone.

Criticism doesn't bother Beny too much. In fact, he likes to be considered controversial. On his cross-Canada tour he delighted in telling Canadian Clubs of Canada members in 10 cities that he hated cameras and didn't like being called a photographer. Waving an imaginary baton over his head, he says in a dream-like way that it's more like being the conductor of an orchestra.

Beny says he used to have "complex equipment" but now has cut down to working with two Nikkons and two Hasselblads. "I hate cameras," he says, pointing out generously that they're "necessary, of course, but they shouldn't dominate but should act as a catalyst between my eye and the subject matter."

The maestro isn't modest. "The camera is the minor object in my books, which I design, edit and in fact do completely," he points out without taking a breath.

Defending his book on Italy, Beny concedes that it isn't basically on Italians or on the clutter of the country but rather on the landscape and on "what the hand of man has created in 3,000 years." He has, he says, tried to project, like a layer cake, the diversified strata that is visually exciting.

"My photography is anti-documentary," Beny stresses. "It is the times of day and the way in which the light changes that excites me rather than the subject matter itself."

Criticism or not, there is no doubt that Beny knows Italy. He was born in Medicine Hat but left there when he was 16 and has lived in a penthouse overlooking the Tiber in Rome for the last 25 years.

Beny loves Iran, which he has visited on and off for 12 years and where he has spent a great deal of the last two years travelling in a station wagon with an Iranian driver and "a sort of court archeologist" who accompanies him everywhere.

The visual part of his book on Persia is complete and has gone to be processed in Verona, Italy. Like his Italian book, the next one will be published in Canada by McLelland and Stewart because, says Beny, "I want this to be a cultural link between Iran and Canada."

"Persia: Bridge of Turquoise" will avoid the potographically obvious. It won't dwell on the famous ruins of Persepolis or the beautiful mosques of Isfahan, the ancient capital. "I dealt heavily with Persepolis in my book "Pleasure of Ruins," explains Beny. "My new book shows the out-of-the-way places, the vanishing mud cities, the crumbling Islamic mosques and the nomadic people."

Finally, is there a word for budding young shutterbugs hoping to take up this kind of art-photography? Well, no there isn't really, says Beny. "You learn it by exposure to situations," he says. "There is no school you can go to," and then with a smile ". . . except perhaps, the school of Life."

Shoal Suits STOL Role

Victoria's role for STOL is mainly on the Shoal — Shoal Point, that is.

Officials of Air West Airlines Ltd. and the de Havilland aircraft company of Toronto told Victoria city council Tuesday that Shoal Point, site of the former VMD shipyard, appears to be the most suitable location for a STOL (short takeoff and landing) airstrip near the city centre.

Air West hopes to obtain such a facility for a regular land-based downtown-to-downtown air service linking Victoria with Vancouver, Seattle and other centres.

The VMD site has been purchased by the federal ministry of transport for an outer-harbor marine services base which is scheduled for completion in 1977, and the two companies' representatives urged the city to open immediate discussions with the federal agency on the feasibility of incorporating a STOL runway in the plans for the base.

They said such a service would be operated by the de Havilland company's ultra-quiet turboprop plane, the Dash 7, which is scheduled to begin test flights early next year and can land on 2,000-foot runways — less than a third of the distance required for conventional aircraft.

(Air West president Norm Gold announced last July that his company had placed orders for two of the planes.)

Arthur Toplis, head of de Havilland's operations analysis group, told council Tuesday the 48-passenger Dash 7, because of its steep angle of climb and landing approach, leaves a "noise footprint" at ground level of less than half a square mile, compared with 30 square miles for conventional aircraft.

If the plane was operating from the proposed runway in James Bay, the noise nuisance at Dallas and Simcoe would be "less than an ordinary diesel truck" passing through, he said.

Toplis said while Shoal Point appears to be the most appropriate location for a STOL strip it is not the only feasible one.

Among other sites the company had studied were Store Street in Victoria's Old Town, land now occupied by a lumber yard at Lime Bay, the Songhees industrial reserve and Esquimalt harbor.

But Toplis said the Songhees and Esquimalt sites had been ruled out "fairly early on" as being too distant from the city centre.

Gold assured aldermen that the introduction of a STOL service would eliminate most of the city's present concerns with regard to the company's floatplane operations in Inner Harbor waters — particularly the noise and safety factors.

But he said even with the company's proposal to provide increased air service to Seattle, by up to four flights per day, he was confident that it would maintain its safety record.

"We will never allow the number of flights to increase to the point where we are playing Russian roulette," he added.

Ald. Sam Bawlf remarked that the city's plans for greater leisure use of the Inner Harbor, including the provision of more berthing facilities for private boats, were bound to reduce the margin of safety in relation to air operations.

City Hall Pay Offer Rejected

Inside workers at City Hall turned down a wage offer Tuesday which was the first increase over the standard 12 per cent raise offered to and rejected by local government employees in Greater Victoia.

"We are hoping they come back with something to improve it," Doug Casey, president of Local 388 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said today.

If not, he added, the membership of the 230 salaried employees has given approval to apply for a mediation officer.

Casey said rejection of the second offer, by a narrow margin, was because it did not bring City Hall clerical pay up to provincial government levels and did not contain a cost-of living clause.

The lowest scale for a clerk or typist of $446 a month would have increased to $598, he said, but this is $21 a month less than the provincial employees who will also get a cost-of-living clause April 1.

He said lower-paid clerks and typists have been "ripped off" in recent years and while "the offer brought them up it was not enough."

The offer, made by the city's negotiating team headed by area negotiator — coordinator E. E. Rearlman, amounted to 15.76 per cent for higher-grade technical and engineering staff.

"We're not that far apart," said Casey. "I still can see a settlement."

City outside workers, meanwhile, will meet Thursday to decide on a date for a strike vote. Their last offer was the standard area proposal of 12 per cent wage hike in a one-year contract and has been turned down.

Ted Chew threatened with charge

Sewage Scheme Refused

A Colwood store owner said Tuesday he is being refused a health permit for use of carbon coal treatment of septic tank waste.

Ted Chew, who runs a grocery store at 2155 Sooke Road where he and his family live, said he has been threatened with court action unless he switches to a conventional tile field.

"We don't discuss an individual's disposal unit with anyone except the individual," he said.

Asked if court action is contemplated, he said "If someone has not got a permit we take whatever action is indicated."

He said the carbon coal treatment is "experimental" and is being looked into by provincial engineers.

Arneil is awaiting results of an inquiry into coal bed systems on both the mainland and here, but he declined to identify the experimental one here as that installed by Vic Josephson at his Metchosin house.

Chew said he has been told by a health inspector that his store may be closed and that court action may be taken because he hasn't got a permit for his carbon coal system.

"I cannot see why," he said, adding that a slaughterhouse on the mainland uses a much bigger system than his.

"It does a better job and saves room and that is why I gave it a try," he said.

"Others do it, why not me? I'm not hurting people. And carbon coal is not cheap, about $600 or $700. It does a better job and is a better way."

The system uses gravel-sized coal in a long narrow filter bed through which trickles septic tank waste. Exactly how the coal removes pollutants from water is not fully known but extensive testing by the system's inventor — Cy Jones of White Rock, B.C. — and University of B.C. professor Lionel Coulthard has shown the coal removes almost 100 per cent of organic material, nitrates and phosphates and heavy metals from waste water.

Man, 81, Charged

Rueben Baker, 1340 Sussex, was remanded to Dec. 18 for election after saying he wanted to consult with a lawyer.

The forged documents are National Insurance Fund pension cheques from Her Majesty's Paymaster-General in Newcastle-Upon-Tyne, England, and were allegedly uttered in Esquimalt, Saanich and Victoria Oct. 25 and 26.

Each cheque was worth 41.4 English pounds.

A source said the Canadian value of the cheques was $1,253.

C. Saanich Adds Police

Two more policemen will be added immediately to the seven-member Central Saanich police force and possibly three others will be taken on later in the year, the municipality's police board decided Tuesday.

The five-man addition was recommended by Chief Bob Miles.

Mayor Jean Butler said the hiring of the three more will depend on help from senior governments.

"If financial assistance is not forthcoming with regard to policing Indian reserves, sharing costs of training and a federal-provincial sharing of costs, then the additional three men would be deferred," she said.

Miles said today he hoped the two recruits authorized would be taken on staff early in the New Year.

TWO DAYS OFF AT YULE FOR B.C. CIVIL SERVANTS

Provincial public servants will work all day Dec. 24 and have two days off for Christmas holidays this year, a day and a half less than their counterparts at the opposite end of the country in Nova Scotia.

The provincial secretary's office said today only Christmas Day (Wednesday) and Boxing Day (Thursday) would be observed by civil servants here, and they would be reporting for duty Friday, Dec. 27.

Counting Shutouts Enough to Tire Gary

By The Canadian Press

It's been suggested by some National Hockey League observers that when goalie Gary Smith gets tired of the work load, Vancouver Canucks will begin to slump.

But as long as the Canucks do as good a job as they did Tuesday night in helping their lanky netminder, he shouldn't have to worry about the work load and can keep busy instead counting his shutouts.

Smith had to make only 19 saves to record his fifth shutout of the season Tuesday night, backing the surprising Canucks in their 18th win, a 3-0 decision over California Seals.

In other NHL games Tuesday, Boston Bruins beat Kansas City Scouts 6-2, Montreal Canadiens defeated Minnesota North Stars 5-3 and New York Islanders edged St. Louis Blues 3-2.

Paulin Bordeleau scored twice to help the Canucks widen their Smythe Division lead to 15 points over second-place Chicago Black Hawks.

After just 29 games, the Canucks now are only seven wins away from breaking their club record of 24 wins in one season set in their first year in 1970-71 and matched last season.

At Minnesota, a three-goal flurry by the Canadiens sent North Stars goalie Cesare Maniago to the showers in the second period.

Maniago took himself out of the game after he misplayed a routine shot by Montreal's Murray Wilson, allowing a goal that gave the Canadiens a 4-2 lead.

"Please leave me alone," said a frustrated Maniago after the game. "I don't want to talk about it."

Maniago slammed his stick to the ice and skated past the North Star bench and ignored an attempt by coach Jack Gordon to keep the goalie in the game.

"I certainly wasn't going to tackle him," said Gordon. "This game can be tough on goaltenders. The other poeple might make mistakes and not be noticed. Everybody sees the goaltender . . . the last line of defence."

Rookie Pete LoPresti finished up in goal for Minnesota, which lost its sixth straight game and dropped three points behind third-place St. Louis in the Smythe Division. The Canadiens' win put them two points ahead of Los Angeles in the Norris Division.

Curling: A Young Rink Joins Select City Group

The youngsters put it all together on the weekend in winning the Playland Curling Club men's bonspiel. It may or may not have been a surprise, depending on where you sit, but the net result could be that Victoria rinks, overall, could be on their way to better things this season in coast playdowns. The competition here is that keen.

The "youngsters" are skip Steve Skillings 19, and members of his rink, Murray Walker 20, Bill Okell 19, and Kim Browning 20. And if Sunday's win over Wayne Statton and before that, Bob Gallaugher, was noteworthy, they have otherwise been close this season. They took second place in "F" event at the Totem in Vancouver, losing only to Ed Risling of Seattle in "A" by one rock and Gene Kraus in "F" final for a 9-and-2 mark.

At the same time, another Victoria rink was doing even better. The Jack Trueman rink qualified for a berth in the Pacific Coast Curling Association playoffs in February by winning "C" event, (8-1) and a third city rink, Ray Benwell of Playland, (6-1) won "B" event to get into a playoff for the second Consols berth, but eventually lost to Jake Block of Abbotsford.

Add to this the fact that Gary Leibel of VCC won the Playland cash and city-based rinks indeed have a fine record of accomplishment.

For Bob, So Close, So Often

Gallaugher, incidentally, has been so close so many times, he must wonder if somebody up there doesn't like him. A PCCA finalist last year, he was in the money at Vernon, went to the semis of "A" in the Totem, was in the final of the Playland cash, and lost in the semis again at Playland Sunday. Trueman, meanwhile, upset by professor Bob Odeh from the Racquet Club earlier, came back to win his event convincingly and no doubt will be a worthy rep once the Consols playdowns roll around.

The Skillings rink, in its first season together, is also right there in results. They reached the final eight in Playland cash before the Totem and before that Skillings and Walker teamed up for an event win in the Thunderbird mixed.

Last year, Skillings skipped and Walker played lead in the Island consols with Lloyd Larson and Corky Davies, but they lost to Gallaugher and Duncan's Gordon Stewart. The previous season, Walker was lead for Tim Horrigan who gained the Island final only to bow out to Stewart and Duncan's Glen Harper.

As for Skillings, he's nearly always been a skip. Three times he went to the Island high school final, once losing by last rock to Brad Clarke. In the meantime he won two Pacific Coast Curling Association junior championships while representing the Racquet Club, once with Walker as vice skip, the other time with Charlie McDiarmid. Last year, McDiarmid won the event and his second was Okell. It may also be recalled that Skillings a year ago went to the finals of the Thunderbird mixed before losing to the friendly giant, Hec Gervais.

The prime reason they got together this year was for a chance to play in the Canada Winter Games. But that game plan got fouled up when the Dominion Curling Association switched the qualifying age from under 21 to under 19. And that move doesn't appear to make much sense because scheduled for Toronto in the spring is the initial world junior championship with an under-21 qualifying age.

Age Switch Fouls Games Plan

As matters now stand, the rink winning the Canadian schoolboy championship, which has an age limit of 18, will represent Canada in the International. Next year, the switcheroo, Colin Campbell, the International Curling Federation president, predicts there will be a new Canadian junior championship with an age limit of 21. This would allow university curlers, excluded from the schoolboy championship, to compete in the Uniroyal world championship.

Depending on the qualifying age date, the Skillings rink may be eligible in '76, so perhaps they can afford to stick together. At any rate they're off to a good start.

Meanwhile, all they have to settle for now is, first, the South Island Consols, then the Island, then the Coast, then the B.C., and then . . .

And I don't really know if they can make it, because of all those other names mentioned earlier — Leibel, Benwell, Trueman, Gallaugher, Harper, Stewart, or maybe Fred Duncan . . . That's how tough it is to even get off the Island. Not to mention other possible upstarts, just like they have been.

Still, I think I'll watch, because if most youngsters' parents are naturally proud of their offspring, I know one who henceforth will simply be pleased to be recognized as the third's father. It's come to that.

Until they forget to concentrate, or need another lecture, which they will get, that is.

Pat's Patience a Virtue That Pays Off in Points

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The going is always easier when you operate with winners, and some of Victoria Cougars' lesser lights brought their reasons out of the shadows with the team's 14-5 romp over the Winnipeg Clubs on Tuesday.

The Western Canada Hockey League result at Memorial Arena has special meaning for Greg Miazga and Eric Sanderson. Miazga scored three goals, Sanderson two.

In Miazga's case, he appreciates the patience rendered.

The goals didn't come to the 19-year-old centre as easily in league play as they did in training camp. Miazga scored only two in Victoria's first 31 games before breaking out Tuesday.

Miazga couldn't be blamed for anticipating a benching. However, the Cougars kept winning and "Ziggy" kept playing.

"He's played well," explained Ginnell, "But of all the players on the team, he was the one who kept getting the worst breaks."

With Sanderson, the appreciation is for Ginnell's confidence-instilling manners.

Obtained from New Westminster Bruins early in November, Sanderson said he felt confidence building as soon as he first talked to Ginnell by telephone. It soared immeasurably after he joined the Cougars.

"If I made a mistake in New Westminster," said the six-foot-five winger, " I found myself sitting on the bench for the rest of the game. I felt I could score, but was treated like a 'goon'."

Sanderson has been getting a chance to contribute offensively, and he hasn't disappointed Ginnell. He now has scored seven goals and added 13 assists in his 12 games with the Cougars. Sanderson has counted at least one point in 10 of his 12 games with Victoria.

The team's top producers have been Mel Bridgman, Peter Morris, Dan Lucas and Jim Gustafson. But of the dominant four, only Lucas and Gustafson were able to score against Winnipeg.

"The Rest" were given their chance to enjoy scoring glory. Miazga ended an 18-game famine. Irv Bowles also broke a lengthy goalless stretch as the Cougars ran their undefeated streak to 17 games.

Mind you, it wasn't too difficult to cut loose against a defensively-weak Winnipeg team. The Clubs have been bombed for 43 goals in their last three games, with Victoria scoring 29 of the total.

It could be that Victoria fans are getting accustomed to success. Only 1,926 showed up, a turnout that betters only a 1,757 house for Cougars' second home game on Oct. 8.

ICE CHIPS: Defenceman Lorri Gloekner and winger Don Cairns were the only Cougars who failed to pick up a point . . . Cougars have scored 58 goals in their last six games . . . Outstanding in defeat was Winnipeg's Pat Meagher . . . He scored once and drew assists on the Club's four other goals . . . Bridgman had three outstanding chances to add to his league leading goals total of 35, but missed the net each time . . . He still picked up three assists to run his point total to 78.

Bridgeman, as always, was brilliant at faceoffs . . . He won 27 of his 33 draws, including all 10 in the third period . . . Victoria's faceoff men won a remarkable 25 out of 27 draws in the third period . . . Tuesday's win gives the Cougars 51 points, which tops the previous season's high of 50 . . . The team leaves Friday for a five-game road trip, starting in Edmonton . . . Defencemen Kim Clackson, who scored twice, and Tim Williams played strongly for the Cats. . . .

Cautioned Crusaders Tumbled by Blazers

By The Canadian Press

Cleveland coach John Hanna warned his Crusaders not to take last-place Vancouver Blazers for granted, but apparently the message didn't sink in.

The Blazers, last in the World Hockey Association Canadian Divison but with five wins in their last six games, beat the Crusaders 4-3 Tuesday night.

"I cautioned them prior to the game for that one reason," Hanna said. "Vancouver isn't as bad as their last-place standing makes them sound. Their season record was 9-11, and we were only 10-7, so we really weren't much better."

The win gave the Blazers a 6-1 record in their last seven games and pulled them to within one point of fourth-place Edmonton Oilers.

In other games Tuesday, Winnipeg Jets beat Indianapolis Racers 5-3, Minnesota Fighting Saints defeated Toronto Toros 4-2, Phoenix Roadrunners defeated Chicago Cougars 4-2 and Michigan Stags played to a 4-4 tie against San Diego Mariners.

The Blazers outskated the Crusaders during the first two periods and held a 4-1 edge going into the final 20 minutes of play.

John Shmyr and Bryan Campbell provided two unassisted goals for the Blazers in the first period. Campbell scored again in the second period and Andy Bathgate added his 350th major-league goal.

The superb goaltending of Don McLeod held off a third-period Cleveland rally. McLeod stopped 39 shots on goal, 17 of them in the third period.

Mike Walton scored twice for Minnesota and emerged with a broken nose after he was cross checked by Toronto's Pat Hickey but the speedy Minnesota forward said he didn't think the injury would keep him out of action.

Selects Slide Past Oil Kings

EDMONTON (CP) — Alexander Golikov scored on a rebound at 14:01 of the final period Tuesday night to give the touring Moscow Selects a 5-4 victory over the strengthened Edmonton Oil Kings in an international exhibition hockey game before 10,164 fans.

Edmonton, strengthened by players from other Western Canada Hockey League clubs, was outshot by the Soviets 46-30, in a well-played contest unlike the occasionally-stormy opening game of the Soviet tour Monday night in Montreal.

The Russians led by 3-1 and 4-3 at the intermissions and Edmonton tied the game for the last time after two minutes of the third period when centre Wayne Perkins fooled netminder Vladimir Polupanov with a rebound.

Perkins also scored in the second period. Edmonton's Terry Bucyk and Medicine Hat standout Don Murdoch added the other goals for the Canadians.

Flashy Zelmut Balderis scored the first two Moscow goals. Golikov also had two and Alexander Abanov the other.

There were only five penalties, all minors. Three went to the Russians, who were involved in a third-period brawl at Montreal in, dropping a narrow decision to a reinforced Montreal junior team.

Midget Goalie Sharp in Debut

Ken Stanton, on loan from the Fuller Lake midget rep team, made 29 saves during a spectacular debut Tuesday night to lead Fuller Lake Flyers to a 7-0 shutout over Saanich Braves in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Pearkes Arena.

Stanton's goaltending display included 12 stops in the first period en route to the Flyers' third win in 18 starts this season.

Tim Hollett and Darryl Parrott each scored twice for Flyers while Gene Wrigglesworth, Mike Rogerson and Fred Mehl added singles.

Now It's Rodeo League

PHOENIX (AP) — Formation by several Phoenix businessmen of the American Rodeo League, complete with hometown teams of cowboys, was announced Monday.

Frank Braggiotti, financial backer of the league, said it would operate the same as professional football, hockey, basketball and baseball leagues.

The league will sell franchises to cities for teams of 20 cowboys and cowgirls, he said. Twelve teams will be set up initially, with competition in 14 rodeos at home and 14 away each year, ending in a sort of world series of rodeos.

A demonstration rodeo using the team system is planned here by the league, which he hopes will be operating by 1976.

Braggiotti said he met with Rodeo Cowboys' Association officials at the National Finals Rodeo last weekend in Oklahoma City. The league would like to draft cowboys from the RCA, and use only RCA livestock contractors for its rodeos, he said.

League president and originator Ron Melling is a former player with Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League and Houston Oilers of the National Football League.

Incorporation papers for the league are being prepared, Melling said with businessmen in 10 cities "highly interested."

The cities are Phoenix, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Houston, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, San Antonio and Memphis, he said.

Team cowboys would earn a salary and share in prize money. The league also would provide medical benefits and travel expenses.

GOOD OLD GEORGE PICKED PRO GRID'S MAN OF YEAR

CANTON, Ohio (AP)—George Blanda, the only man ever to play a quarter of a century in professional football, has been named the 1974 Man of the Year by the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The 47-year-old place-kicker and former star quarterback of Oakland Raiders, who was inducted into the Hall of Fame this year, will be honored in Oakland Dec. 21 prior to the Raiders' first-round National Football League playoff game against Miami Dolphins.

Blanda the oldest player ever to compete in major league pro football, began his career in 1949 with the NFL's Chicago Bears, then retired after the 1958 season.

But with the birth of the American Football League, Blanda returned to action, quarterbacking Houston to championships in 1960 and 1961 and staying with the Oilers until 1967, when he was traded to the Raiders.

The Youngwood, Pa., native hasn't thrown a pass since the 1972 season. But before then, he threw 4,000 of them, completing 1,908 for 26,881 yards and 235 touchdowns.

Blanda holds or shares a number of NFL records and he sets another every time he steps on the field. He and Oakland centre Jim Otto have played in 209 straight games, a 15-season string dating back to the old AFL's first game in 1960.

Several Methods Exist To Better Hunting Image

With a great deal of ad-libbing, because of a mixup over topics, Roderick Haig-Brown managed to come up with some concrete methods by which hunters could improve their deteriorating public image during an address to the Vancouver Island Wildlife Association meeting Sunday in Parksville.

He came prepared to speak on ethics, a topic he covered during an speech to the federal-provincial wildlife conference in Victoria earlier this year. Luckily, the theme of hunters as an endangered species was closely inter-related.

First of all, he reiterated his stand taken in Victoria that hunters should end their "unholy alliance" with the National Rifle Association and ammunition manufacturers. I still agree with this position and think NRA lobbying over the right to bear arms does nothing to help the hunting fraternity in terms of his position among urban citizens of both Canada and the United States.

And it should be pointed out that hunting is coming under fire mainly in highly populated areas. People living a little closer to nature in the rural regions don't seem to develop the same emotional hang-up over shooting birds and animals for sport or meat.

Haig-Brown, who is perhaps the most-read conservationist in B.C., has become a naturalist in the past few years.

"I used to hunt quite a lot. I stopped hunting large game many years ago and really phased out of wingshooting a couple of years ago.

"But I did wingshoot with great enthusiasm and believe in both sports," he added. His concern over wounding game gradually led to an end to his hunting activities.

He also suggests that hunters shouldn't resist firearms registration but tempered this saying he didn't mean the Cameron bill, which is currently before the Senate.

"If established, that would provide for registration similar to the way handguns are now registered," explained Haig-Brown. "But I would call for a much simpler form of registration. which I think could easily be done, and it would be good public relations for the hunter."

He also encouraged hunters to "show a great deal of consideration for the non-consumptive user."

"Encourage wildfowl refuges and bird sanctuaries instead of opposing them wherever you can, especially when the area is close in and the public is going to have a good chance to see them.

"It doesn't help the hunter a bit to have a hassle over whether he is going to continue shooting for a few more years on some close-in area that the naturalists would like for a sanctuary."

Haig-Brown then advised hunters and fishermen to go on protecting the environment from abuse of any kind.

"Sportsmen have a good record on this," he said. "Sportsmen often describe their record and take credit for it — go on doing so — you're fully entitled to it.

"The sportsmen, I think, have always done more than the non-consumptive users and I don't think it would do a bit of harm to suggest that naturalists, bird people and so on should put themselves in the picture by buying something like a migratory bird permit."

Here's where ethics pop into the picture.

"The really unethical hunter is the heaviest liability the sport has to bear. And he usually doesn't know that he's being unethical," Haig-Brown stated.

Education from the ground up, he feels, will remedy this situation.

"You can't really legislate ethics," he explained. "The growth of traditions and the use of the standards of one's fellows are what makes them. They're usually adopted in emulation and become rooted in conviction later on."

He added that the "unethical hunter — and sometimes the ethical hunter — leaves signs that he doesn't need to leave.

"There is, of course, the draping of dead animals over cars and trucks." This especially appears bad when the vehicle is parked outside the local watering hole.

Another point which Haig-Brown felt helps alienate the hunter is the unnecessary displaying of guns.

"I see a guy with three or four guns in the back of a pickup and I think: There's a road hunter.

"And I think the general public views this as a sign of phony machismo."

The idiotic practice of shooting up road signs also "looks like hell to the non-hunter."

Haig-Brown urged hunters to police themselves and heed the "observe, record and report" message contained in the hunting regulations for the first time this season.

"I don't mean go out and try to arrest them (game law violators), that's a different story altogether," he said. "You can't make a citizen's arrest on a summary conviction matter — and all game violations are summary conviction matter."

In closing. I would like to point out that a great many of the points Haig-Brown brought up are now in the process of being corrected.

But the work should be progressing at a faster rate.

Southpaw With a Sabre, Eric Aims at Olympics

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH
Times Staff

You'd almost expect a fencer to be short, stocky, look something like Ronald Coleman and speak English with a European accent.

It's not always so.

So how does a 22-year-old Victoria native with a soccer and cycling background get involved in the unlikely Canadian endeavor of fencing?

"My girlfriend used to fence at the University of Victoria and she used to haul me along when she went. Finally, I got tired of just watching and decided to give it a try. I've been a fencer ever since," Smith explained.

That was three years ago and Smith has come a long way since. He's made the B.C. fencing team in sabre for the 1975 Canada Winter Games to be held in February at Lethbridge and he wants to climb into the top 10 this year in Canadian sabre rankings.

The fact that fencing isn't a widely popular pastime doesn't keep Smith from maintaining a workmanlike attitude towards the sport, the only one in which he indulges.

"Naturally I'd like to make the Olympics, but I'm not setting 1976 as a goal. I'd really like to make it, though, for the 1980 Games."

His most immediate move will be in January, back to UVic for his second year of history and education studies.

Smith keeps a sharp competitive edge by fencing and taking instruction for six hours a week. He complements that by running three to five miles a day and lifting weights.

"Fencing is 50 per cent physical and 50 per cent mental, but you sure have to be in good shape to compete," he said.

Two advantages the six-foot-one Smith enjoys are a long reach and his lefthanded fighting style, something which many righthanded fencers agree presents a problem.

But why fence?

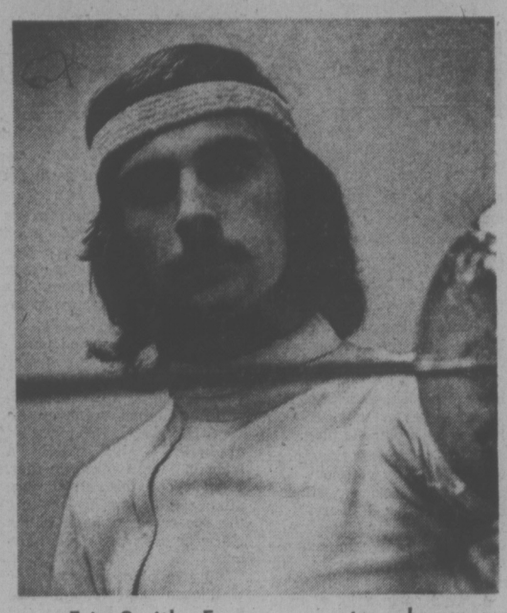
"Well, it's the over-all thing which appeals to me. I enjoy it as an individual sport and it's been a good way to meet people," he said.

Smith belongs to the UVic Fencing Club, one of three in the city. Victoria City Fencing Club and Royal Roads are the others. The only other club on the island is in Nanaimo.

"I get to travel around the country for meets and I've noticed that fencing is starting to grow. Younger people are getting more interested and at Handsworth High School in North Vancouver, fencing is even on the physical education program," he pointed out.

As for sabre, Smith allows it's rougher than foil or epee, often leaving its participants with nasty welts and bruises on their arms. But, he says, he's never sustained any serious injury fencing.

"Still, sabres require certain masochistic strains on behalf of its fencers and I guess I just have that strain," he grinned.



Eric Smith: From soccer to sabre.

Edmonton Rink Wins More Cars

EDMONTON (CP)—A brilliant display of shotmaking carried Vic Wintoniak of Edmonton to a one-sided 9-3 victory over Don Longmore of Red Deer Tuesday night as Wintoniak became the third skip to win two Canadian open car bonspiels.

Wintoniak who also won the cars in 1969, did not miss a complete shot in disposing of Longmore in 10 ends. He stole a single on an extra end to eliminate George Fink of Calgary 10-9 in a semi-final.

Longmore won his semi-final match with a last-rock 8-6 victory over Lyle Davis of Lethbridge.

Donna Clark of Burnaby, meanwhile, defeated Betty Cole of Edmonton 8-4 Tuesday night to become the first two-time winner of the Tournament of Pearls curling championship.

Clark, who won the event in 1972 and was runner-up last year, trailed 2-1 after three ends but counted on each of the next five ends—including a three on the sixth that broke the game open.

In the consolation final, Myrna McQuarrie of Lethbridge drew to the four-foot ring in an extra end to nip Ruth Ulrich of Edmonton 8-5.

If It Wasn't for the Managers . . .

SCHOOL SPORTS

By Jim Crerar

Three cheers for the star athlete, by all means, but today let's hear it for the guy who picks the towel up off the gym floor.

Or the gal who hands out the meal money.

Or the fellow who lugs the bucket along the sidelines.

Without the team manager, Saturday's hero — college, high school or sandlot variety — would be just another slob looking for a place to play.

"If the least little thing goes wrong, who hears about it?" asked Mike Elcock, athletic director at the University of Victoria. "The manager. And when everything runs smoothly, it's taken for granted. Our managers do a tremendous job. We'd be in a lot of trouble without them."

No doubt about it, they're the unsung heroes and heroines of the game. Let Viking guard Robbie Parris pull a back muscle, for example, and everybody hears about it. But does anybody know the name of the guy who's been applying ice packs every day to Robbie's aching back?

He's one of 18 managers at UVic this year, including 16 students and two non-students who spend up to three hours a day looking after the athletes and coaches without getting a dime in pay.

Half of those 16 students are enroled in physical education and many of them are late cuts from the teams they manage, so for them it's largely a case of staying involved.

For the two non-students — Viking soccer manager George Smith of UVic's purchasing department and Vikette volleyball manager Aileen Hay, a UVic phys ed graduate — it's strictly a labor of love. George, in fact, goes beyond the call of duty after each game by inviting the soccer team back to his place for beer and a post mortem.

It's a labor of love, too, for Watkinson and others like him. It has to be when you add up all the duties. At practice each day, for example, Watkinson makes sure there are enough basketballs, sets out shirts for the players, runs the time clock when needed and attends to a myriad of small details he can't begin to list.

On nights the Vikings are home, he meets with the opposing manager, makes certain their needs are looked after and gets out the home team uniforms. During the game, he keeps statistics for coach Gary Taylor. After it's over he picks up the towels, makes sure the dressing rooms are left clean and phones game results to the media.

Road games only add to the burden. Elcock and athletic department secretary Irene Garnham take care of plane and hotel reservations but Watkinson must get the players to the airport or ferry, arrange for taxis at their destination, dole out the meal money and distribute the room keys. And he must submit an itemized account of all expenditures when he gets home.

Getting the players to the right place at the right time can pose a problem in logistics, too. Watkinson has never lost a player but Bev Draper, manager of the basketball Vikettes, came close recently when one of the star players overslept by two hours. She made it only because weather delayed the plane's takeoff for that length of time.

As if he didn't have enough to do, Watkinson also serves as the Vikings' trainer and that's the part of the job he likes best. Students in Bob Bell's phys. ed. classes dealing with the care and prevention of injuries must serve as trainers for teams at UVic or in the city as part of their course.

Accordingly, Watkinson applies the ice packs to Parris' back and spend a half-hour before workouts and games taping up the walking wounded. Before the Christmas break, he was tending to Lorne Dakin, Leon Mitchell, Dale MacDonald and Dave Mulcahy, applying up to five rolls of tape measuring a total of more than 200 feet.

"That's the super part of the job," he said. Now he's wondering if he should consider a career in sports medicine.

There are other rewards, too. Watkinson gets to travel with the team, enjoys being with the players and gets a first-hand look at Taylor's coaching tactics.

"I get a chance to know the psychological makeup of each player and see how Gary handles them. It's giving me a general idea of how to handle people when I get out teaching."

Elcock rates this year's crop of managers the most reliable he's ever had, so they can all take a bow. They include Watkinson, Smith, Miss Draper, Mrs. Hay, Frank Biehl, Jayvee basketball; Jim Thorne, cross-country; Ken Fines, curling; Thomas Dendy, men's field hockey; Debbie Fulmore, Vikette field hockey; Joan Fleischer, Vagabond field hockey; Al Patey, gymnastics; Gilf Watson, Viking hockey; Tom Wilson, judo; Mark Bell, Viking rugby; Murray Robinson, skiing; Ian Gilbert, Noresemen soccer; Brian Hawksworth, track and field, and Bruce Laurie, Viking volleyball.

BOBBY UNSER
. . . bum rap for racing

JUST WHO IS USING UP ALL THAT SCARCE GAS?

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Unser, auto racing's 1974 driver of the year, said Tuesday that it is ridiculous for the sport to curtail its program on the pretext of setting an example in the fuel crisis.

"I am thinking primarily of what the Indianapolis Speedway did last year," added the 40-year-old veteran of the grease pits. "Tony Hulman the race director cut preparations down from a month to two weeks."

Unser said Hulman's move last May in reducing qualifying days to two from four and squeezing the trials into two weeks instead of four, was an act to show that the sport was willing to make sacrifices for the sake of fuel economy.

"It was just a gesture really meant nothing," he said. "The fuel we use is methanol, which has a wood and not a petroleum base. The amount of oil we use in a machine is minimal.

"So what happened? The drivers were put in a bind. There is a tremendous loss in crowds, both for the trials and the race. I'll bet altogether Hulman lost $3 or $4 million.

"Did you know that a charter plane carrying a football team from New York to California uses more petroleum-based fuel than auto drivers use in an entire season on the circuit?"

Unser, second youngest son in a family of famed racing drivers, was in New York to receive $7,500 in gold coins and a trophy as the year's top auto race driver.

Emile Griffith Posts Single-Handed Victory

MONTREAL (CP) —Emile Griffith of New York scored a unanimous 10-round junior middleweight decision over Donato Paduano of Montreal Tuesday night, fighting with only his left hand after a third-round injury to his right shoulder.

Griffith, 36, five-time world champion in the welterweight and middleweight divisions, said he injured his right shoulder in the third round.

"I clipped him with the right good and when I picked it up to throw again the whole arm was numb," he said.

Gil Clancy, his manager, said he considered asking the referee to stop the fight but changed his mind when it became apparent Paduano was unable to exploit the handicap.

Paduano, 26, said his plan was to circle to Griffith's left and that he was unaware Griffith was fighting with only one hand.

"We knew he was a good hitter with the right," he said. "Our strategy was to stay away from it. I never knew he wasn't throwing rights.

Griffith, appearing in his 100th professional fight, weighed 157 pounds to Paduano's 151½ and now has 82 wins, 17 losses and one draw.

Paduano, former Canadian welterweight champion, now has 41 wins, seven losses and one draw. Both fighters were guaranteed $20,000.

In the semi-final, 36-year-old Joey Durelle of Sorel, Que., earned a draw with Fernand Marcotte of Quebec City in a 10-round middleweight contest.

In a preliminary bout Barry Sponagle of New Glasgow, N.S., earned a shot at the Canadian lightweight championship with a 10-round split decision over Paul Collette of Montreal.

A Discard Trumps Ipswich

LONDON (CP) — Winger John Miller, obtained two months ago from Ipswich Town, scored two goals Tuesday to give Norwich City a 2-1 win over his former team in English League Cup soccer competition.

The win advanced Norwich to the semi-finals against either Middlesbrough or Manchester United.

Miller, purchased from Ipswich for $91,350, scored for Norwich in the 34th and 47th minutes of the quarter-final replay after David Johnson had given Ipswich a 30th-minute lead.

Leicester City, second from the bottom in the First Division, lost 3-0 to Middlesbrough. It was the sixth league game in a row without a win for Leicester.

Mates Pick Him as MVP But Joe's Mum on Plans

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath continued his silence over future plans Tuesday in accepting the National Football League team's Most Valuable Player award.

Elected MVP by his teammates for the third time in his career, Namath called the honor "probably the most valuable award I could receive," and added he didn't think he was voted the award to keep him from leaving New York.

The 31-year-old signal caller is one game away from completing the option year on his Jets contract, and there are numerous rumors about his plans for next year. Some reports have him retiring to enter show business, others indicate a trade to Los Angeles Rams or a jump to the World Football League.

But Namath, who has refused to comment on next season, said Tuesday: "I've always said I liked this team, and I don't know if a better situation could exist in pro football.

"This year, there could have been a lot of dissension, but everybody got along well."

He also was voted MVP after the Super Bowl championship year in 1968 and in the playoff year of 1969. This year, the Jets have won their last five games after a disastrous start.

"If Namath intends to stay in football, we want him to play with the Jets," said owner Phil Iselin. "Personally, if this be the case, I would do everything possible to keep him.

"But if Joe decides he doesn't want to play any more football, I would respect his wishes. There would be no arm-twisting."

The decision on whether Broadway Joe will renew his contract with the National Football League's Jets or opts for other ventures is one that will be made possibly within the next three or four weeks.

"I will make up my mind before the draft," Namath said Sunday after leading the Jets to a 20-10 victory over Buffalo Bills, the team's fifth straight triumph. He is in the last year of a $250,000-a-year contract.

The late season success of the Jets, which included a victory over the Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins, appears to have diluted somewhat Joe's insistance that he didn't expect to return to the Jets in 1975.

"I don't know why they would want me," he said in a recent interview. "They are a rebuilding team; they should be working in a new, young quarterback."

At the time the Jets were struggling, having lost six in a row for a 1-7 start.

Canada Seeks NATO Deals

RICHARDSON

Times News Service

BRUSSELS — Canadian Defence Minister James Richardson told NATO allies Tuesday that Canada deserves a bigger share of the defence contracts that have been going to Europe and the United States in the past.

"We're not in NATO for economic benefit," he said in an interview after a meeting with other defence ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"But we want to get in on the action like everybody else."

Meanwhile U.S. Secretary of Defence James Schlesinger told NATO's defence planning committee that Europe could no longer rely on the American "umbrella" of security to offset drops in defence spending.

But absent from his speech was any threat that such cuts might induce the U.S. to take American troops out of Europe.

Richardson said Canada has contributed about $255 million during NATO's 25-year lifespan for shared infrastructure — things ranging from hangars and offices to costly communications gear.

But the companies and civilian workers reaping the benefits of this NATO spending had been mostly European and American. European economies had been enriched by installations and employment on the continent, while U.S. firms had supplied high-technology goods.

Richardson said long negotiations over one new NATO project have brought greater rewards for Canadian companies.

Canada will provide $18 million in the next several years to help pay for telegraphic automatic relay equipment to be used by the defence forces. Under the agreement, $12 million of that will be spent in Canada for hardware and services.

But the minister said he wants more in future, and that the other ministers "were quite understanding."

He has set his sights on major Canadian contract-sharing in a planned system of NATO ground terminals for satellites, to come under negotiation next year.

The closed-door meetings of defence ministers, to conclude today, will be followed Thursday and Friday by the regular autumn meeting of NATO foreign ministers, in which External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen will take part.

With his remarks on defence spending, Richardson stepped into an argument already running between European allies and Washington about who should get the bounty from ever-rising defence spending.

He coupled his plea to assurance that Canada is keeping its total defence spending roughly in line with Canadian inflation, and that Ottawa plant "to maintain at current strength our forces stationed in Europe, and also their support in Canada."

He said keeping the 5,000-man Canadian air and land forces in West Germany now costs more than $100 million a year.

This year, Canada would spend $2.5 billion for its total defence bill, 12.4 per cent more than last year.

The total would rise another 11.2 per cent in 1975-76.

"Any reports about cutbacks in the Canadian defence budget are erroneous," he said.

Jail Convinces Union Man to Testify

MONTREAL (CP) — The royal commission on construction union freedoms flexed its judicial muscles for the first time Tuesday, jailing one witness and issuing bench warrants for the arrest of two others.

Jean-Claude Sureau, a regional co-ordinator of the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) Provincial Council of Building Trades, was held in cells during the noon recess after he refused to be sworn in, but later returned before the commission and apologized for his conduct.

Judge Robert Cliche, commission chairman, also issued warrants for the arrest of two witnesses who failed to appear at the inquiry as required Tuesday.

Sureau's two-hour jail term was imposed after he refused to be sworn in until Michel Bourdon, president of the Conferation of National Trade Unions (CNTU) construction unions' federation was ordered to move from his seat near the witness box.

Sureau spent the rest of the day in the witness box where he described his background and denied involvement in payoff schemes, extortion or loan-sharking activities in which other QFL construction union officers have been implicated.

Mexico Police Vow Revenge After 5 Die

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico City's police department vowed today to avenge the death of five of its men gunned down by 15 stocking-masked terrorists who raided two local banks and made off with $200,000.

Two other policemen wounded in the robberies Tuesday were reported in serious condition.

A police spokesman said no arrests had been made, and the department had no clues to the identity of the bandits.

More than 30 policemen have been killed in Mexico City this year in clashes with terrorists, but this was the largest casualty toll in one clash.

Three women were reported among the 15 masked persons who pulled up to the Banco de Comercio and the Banco Nacional de Mexico on opposite corners in an industrial district and opened fire with rifles on police stationed outside.

Two officers were killed instantly and three others died soon after in a hospital.

ECM Talks: France Yields

PARIS (WP) — The nine-nation European Common Market summit wrangled all day Tuesday but finally came to grips with two problems threatening its existence — continued British membership and co-operation with the United States in combatting the energy crisis.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing received Common Market endorsement to present President Ford in their meeting next weekend with a compromise plan designed to resolve U.S.-French differences in dealing with the energy squeeze.

And in a last minute compromise, the European leaders papered over a bitter French-British argument about Britain's demands for sizeable reductions in its Common Market budget contribution as the price for continuing British membership.

These were the principal — and limited — achievements for the two-day summit which took place in the shadow of the worst inflation, unemployment and balance of payments deficits to confront the Common Market since it was formed in 1968.

However, in the light of the Common Market's proven inability to translate into meaningful policy the high-sounding language of previous summit meetings, observers were guarded in their predictions about how the Common Market will fare in facing its worst crisis.

Symptomatic of the day's mood was the tough British stance which resulted in what struck observers as a considerable concession by France, the toughest adversary of Britain's efforts to scale down its contribution to running the Common Market.

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson late Tuesday night said that "undoubtedly we've made progress. It was not easy." But he stressed that there was "still a very long way to go" and that he expected progress on all the remaining six points of his Labor government's demands for renegotiating the terms of its Common Market membership.

Even that language appeared to be a total reversal of Wilson's blunt midday warning when faced with Giscard d'Estaing's refusal to yield on Britain's arguments about it's declining economic strength.

For fear of dismantling the Common Market's complicated revenue earning system, the French have refused to listen to Wilson's case that Britain cannot continue to pay 24 per cent of the community's total budget while producing only 14 per cent of its gross national product.

"If what you say, Mr. President, is to be the definitive view of the community, then I see no hope whatsoever of successful negotiation," Wilson warned.

At this point, the French were faced with solid support for the British position from the seven other member governments, and began an afternoon — and evening-long retreat that finally resulted in adoption of a compromise proposed by Italian Prime Minister Aldo Moro.

The Common Market executive and its council of ministers were finally instructed to set up "as soon as possible a correcting mechanism" to meet British demands or, as the communique put it, to avoid "situations unacceptable for a member state and incompatible with the smooth working of the Community."

French face was saved by acknowledging that this exceptional procedure does not imply dismantling the Common Market's revenue system.

However, British sources took a somewhat different view. They claimed the communique accepted for the first time that Britain has a special problem that the Common Market is committed to trying to find a "corrective mechanism" by mid winter, and that the Common Market executive should take into account the British government's suggestions in putting together this mechanism.

EGG CHARGES LAID

OTTAWA (CP) — A Toronto consumer has started an action in the Federal Court in which he seeks a declaration that Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan and the Canadian Egg Marketing Board have failed in their duty to the Canadian people.

Michael Carson, an officer of the Ontario Anti-Poverty Coalition, filed the writ in the Federal Court but no date has been set for a hearing.

He alleges that the minister and the egg board, through incorrect and negligent calculations, deprived Canadians of the right to buy eggs at a reasonable price.

Through their policies, said Carson, the board collected 28 million eggs and then destroyed them.

Indians Block Dam Plans

OTTAWA (CP) — Great Bear Lake in the Mackenzie district was likened Tuesday to a giant freezer of food for Indian people in the area.

Appearing before the Commons Indian affairs committee, Chief George Kodigan of Fort Franklin opposed plans by the Northern Canada Power Commission to build dams on the lake.

Speaking in his native Slavey language, the chief said:

"The lake is like a freezer full of fish. When we are hungry, we go to this freezer and get fish from it. That is how we feed our families."

Chief Arrowmaker of Rae-Edzel complained about the federal power agency not consulting the Indians about power developments.

The Northwest Territories Indian Brotherhood said amendments proposed by the power commission will enable it to go ahead without public hearings on five large power developments in the Mackenzie, including dams on Great Bear and on the Mackenzie.

The brotherhood opposed the amendments on that ground as well as insisting that no massive developments, including the proposed natural gas pipeline, go through until their land claims are settled.

Even if the claims were settled, said brotherhood president James Wah-shee, the Indians want to be fully consulted about the projects.

BRIDLE BITS

By PHIL MERRICK

Nearly 20 trophies were presented at the Sunset Riding Club's annual banquet held in the Legion hall on Mills Road in Sidney last Friday.

The club, which has one of the area's largest memberships, had a turnout of more than 100 at the event — highlighted by turkey dinner with the works.

Jack Davis showed a film he made at the club's competitive trail ride in October. Many members seeing themselves in action were highly amused by the high-calibre production.

Arrangements were in the hands of Joan Walker, Mrs. A. Chandler, Coleen Hague and Mrs. R. Johnson. Corsages were presented by Mrs. Hague to Dorothy Jordan, Alice Budesheim and Mrs. Walker and boutineeres to Tim Hives and President Roy Budesheim in recognition of their assistance throughout the year.

Sylvia Thistle was awarded the western Equitation "A" trophy and the junior Western Pleasure Cup. Nancy McMinn took home the English Equitation "A" silverware and with it the Green Jumper and English Pleasure to entitle her to the High Point English horse trophy. English Equitation "B" event to Laura Budeshelm while Suzanne Fox picked up the "B" Western Rowan Hives' "Trigger" was High Point English Pony and also took the English Equitation "C" award as well as Pony Jumper.

A three-way tie for High Point Western Pony was made up of Lynn Caldwell, Joan Fox and Megan Soellner with this young lady also going up to receive the Western "C" award. Dale Caldwell took High Point Western, and Senior Western Pleasure Horse. Karen Waterton with her horse Deskanea was awarded the Showmanship Trophy whilst Dorothy Jordan had the High Point Trail horse in "Sugar." "Royal Rocket-Ship" owned by Nicola Hives was declared "Best all-round family Horse" and Nicola went up to be presented with that Award. The Award for Best Club attitude and Sportsmanship went to Mrs. Coleen Hague.

3 tablespoons sugar.
3½ cups corn flakes or bread crumbs
Colored candies.

YOUR TURN TO COOK: ULSTER WHEATEN BREAD

By ANNE SIMMONS

Today's reader recipe was submitted by Anne Simmons, dietician, nutritionist and mother. If you have a favorite or family recipe you would gladly share, please send it to the Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas.)

This is really our Canadian version of traditional Irish soda bread. The recipe was developed from local recipes and neighborly advice during our recent stay in Belfast.

This year, I began adding bran after we assessed the results of a cross-over study in the Belfast teaching hospital where I was employed. Normal volunteers had replaced their usual intake of bread, rolls and biscuits with standard (Ulster) wheaten bread for one six-week period and had also substituted a bran-fortified wheaten bread for another six-week period.

In Belfast, a commercially-prepared, bran-fortified loaf now sells well but of course many people prefer to make their own to economize. In Victoria, I find I can make one loaf for approximately 50 cents if I shop carefully for the ingredients.

ULSTER WHEATEN BREAD

½ cup wheat germ
1 cup bran
3 cups 100 per cent whole wheat flour
½ cup enriched all-purpose flour
1 tspn. salt
2 tspn. baking soda
2 tspn. cream of tartar
2 cups buttermilk

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Grease bread pan (9 by 5 by 3-inch.) If a 9 by 5 by 4-inch pan is used, the loaf will be acceptable, but somewhat shallow for making sandwiches.

Measure wheat germ, bran and whole wheat flour into a large bowl. Stir to mix. Measure all-purpose flour into a sieve or sifter. Measure salt, baking soda and cream of tartar and add to all-purpose flour. Sieve or sift together into bowl containing first three ingredients. Stir all dry ingredients to mix thoroughly. Make a well in the centre. Add buttermilk all at once. Stir with rubber spatula or wooden spoon. Mixture should be slack but not wet and the mixing should be done lightly and quickly. If too stiff, add more buttermilk. Shape dough with floured hands and put into pan. Press down top if a regular-shaped loaf is required.

If you wish a traditional round loaf, flatten the dough into a circle about 1½-inch thick. Put on a greased baking sheet and make a large cross on it with a floured knife.

Bake at 400 degrees F. for approximately 50 minutes. Remove from pan to cool. To keep the loaf soft, wrap in a clean towel immediately.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

In Defence of Dark Bread

By Dr. JEAN MAYER

In recent months, certain consumer advocates have cast doubt on the nutritional quality of darker breads, hinting they are not always what they appear to be. They have asserted, for example, that pumpernickel is "nothing but unenriched white bread with coloring poured in to darken it." Much the same kind of thing has been said about whole wheat and rye breads.

Since I not only consider dark breads more nutritious than white, but also find them tastier, I decided to look into the matter at our local supermarket. First I checked on the nutrient composition and ingredients of various dark breads, and what I found was, on the whole, rather reassuring. The largest manufacturers, with national distribution, do not put unenriched white flour in their dark breads. And they do, indeed, use whole wheat and rye flours.

When whole-grain flour is listed as "enriched," this means it has been fortified with thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, and iron at approximately the same levels found in enriched white flour. Calcium is also added to breads made with water to bring them to the level of white bread made with milk.

As for coloring, I found that dark syrups such as molasses or honey are frequently added for flavor, especially to wheat breads, and that burnt sugar sometimes is used for a "more attractive color." Although sugar in any form is not a nutritional plus, burnt sugar appears no worse than the white sugar that is usually added to white bread. While it may seem odd to add color, especially since we refine our white flour to 70 per cent extraction and sacrifice much of its nutritional value to achieve snowy white bread, this addition to dark breads really cannot be considered outright deception.

I also compared the major nutrients in enriched white and dark breads, something you will be able to do yourself as nutritional labelling becomes more common. I found that for every 100 grams of bread—about three or four slices — we have about equal amounts of protein (8 to 10 grams), carbohydrates (42 to 49 grams), fat (3½ to 4½ grams), calcium, iron and the major B vitamins, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin.

However, the whole grains still are more nutritious than white flours because they retain more of the other B vitamins—pyridoxine, folic acid and pantothenic acid—and Vitamin E and trace minerals such as zinc, selenium and manganese. These are milled out of white flour and are not replaced under present enrichment standards. In addition pumpernickel and whole wheat breads contain about 1 to 1½ per cent fiber, but most of the roughage is missing from white bread.

While my survey has convinced me that our bread is not being widely adulterated, I'm also reminded that we have a way to go before we achieve the nutritious loaves of our forefathers. Perhaps the most important step in retrieving the nutrition lost in today's bread would be to cut down on the refining of white flour, which would preserve more B vitamins, Vitamin E and trace minerals. The change we would have to accept—and it's a small price—is that the bread would be an off-white in color.

Infinite Ways Of Serving Pork

Tender, juicy pork brings variety to both family and gourmet meals, because of the many cuts available and the infinite ways of serving them. The cut to buy depends largely on the occasion and the budget. For eleganee at Easter or for variety all year round, pork is a favorite.

Popular cuts of pork are the loin, the leg and the shoulder. The loin, choice cut of the pork carcass, is probably most familiar to homemakers. It is sold as roasts or chops. Most loin roasts, bone-in, are from the leg or rib end. The centre cut of the loin is usually sold as chops.

Ham usually refers to a leg of pork that has been cured and smoked. The leg may be left whole or divided into shank and butt. The butt portion (upper, thicker part of the ham) contains a higher proportion of lean meat to bone and may cost slightly more per pound than the shank half. Processing techniques increase the cost of ham. Bone-in, partially skinned, uncooked hams cost less than boneless, skinned, fully cooked ones.

Cuts from the shoulder are less expensive than the loin and leg cuts. Good buys include pork shoulder roasts such as the picnic shoulder (lower part), the Boston butt (upper part) and blade chops.

Fruit garnishes complement the rich flavor of pork and add a distinctive touch of elegance to the meal.

FRUIT-STUFFED GLAZED HAM

2 tablespoons chopped onion.
¼ cup chopped celery.
2 tablespoons butter.
2 cups soft bread crumbs.
¼ cup raisins.
½ cup unpeeled chopped apple.
¼ teaspoon salt.
⅛ teaspoon pepper.
¼ teaspoon ginger.
1 egg, beaten.
3 pounds boneless, fully cooked ham.
¼ cup brown sugar.
2 teaspoons cornstarch.
¾ cup apple cider.

To make stuffing saute onion and celery in butter until onion is transparent. Combine next 6 ingredients. Add celery, onion and beaten egg. Mix well. Cut ham in half lengthwise and remove skin. Stuff, tie and skewer. Bake 1½ to 1¾ hours at 325 degrees F (140 degrees F. on a meat thermometer). To make glaze, combine brown sugar and cornstarch. Add slowly to cider. Stir and cook until thick and clear. Glaze ham and return to oven for 10 minutes. 6 servings.

Family-Favorite Creations With Yogurt

Yogurt is one of the oldest fermented milks known. Many of the earliest records, particularly those of ancient India, Persia and Egypt, abound with references to yogurt. Frequent mention of yogurt appears in the early histories of such faraway places as Lapland, Scandinavia, and Mongolia; even Marco Polo wrote of eating it in China.

The calorie content of yogurt varies from one brand to another and from flavor to flavor. In general terms, plain regular (set type) or plain Swiss (stirred type) have approximately 112 calories per six ounces and flavored types approximately 170 calories per six ounces.

Yogurt can be eaten as is, or sweetened with honey, sugar, maple syrup, jams or jellies. Additional sweetness does not lessen its nutritional value but increases the calories. Yogurt is also delicious on vegetable and fruit salads, or mixed with cottage cheese.

And there's more to yogurt. You can create great new family favorites when you're cooking in the kitchen — satisfying main dishes, desserts or fun snacks. From the experimental kitchens of Agriculture Canada come these two swinging desserts: "Yogurt Pie with Strawberry Sauce", and "Lemon Yogurt Pie". Tart refreshing yogurt adds a new dimension to family eating.

YOGURT LEMON PIE

⅓ cup cornstarch
1 cup sugar.
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
¼ teaspoon salt.
1¾ cups natural yogurt.
3 egg yolks, beaten.
¼ cup lemon juice.
2 tablespoons butter
1 baked 9-inch pie shell
3 egg whites.
Dash salt.
6 tablespoons sugar.

Mix cornstarch, 1 cup sugar, lemon rind and ¼ teaspoon salt. Gradually add yogurt and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add a little hot mixture to beaten egg yolks, stir into remaining mixture in pan and cook 1 minute. Add lemon juice and butter. Cool slightly and pour into pie shell.

To make meringue, beat egg whites and salt until soft peaks form. Gradually beat in the 6 tablespoons sugar until stiff peaks form. Spread over pie, sealing to edge of crust. Bake at 350 degrees F. until lightly browned (10 to 12 minutes). Chill. 6 servings.

YOGURT PIE WITH STRAWBERRY SAUCE

1½ cups vanilla wafer crumbs.
3 tablespoons melted butter.
6 ounces natural yogurt.
8 ounces cream cheese, softened
2 tablespoons honey.
½ teaspoon vanilla.
1 teaspoon gelatin.
2 tablespoons cold water.
2 cups strawberries (about 1 pint)
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1-3 cup sugar.
Dash salt.
1 teaspoon lemon juice.

To make crust combine crumbs and butter. Press into greased 9-inch pie plate. bake 3 to 4 minutes at 425 degrees F. Cool. Beat yogurt, cream cheese, honey and vanilla together until consistancy of whipping cream. Allow gelatin to soak in water, heat to melt then cool until partially set. Add to yogurt mixture, bveat for one minute. Pour into shell and chill. To make sauce, mash 1 cup strawberries and slice remainder. Mix cornstarch, sugar and salt. Gradually blend in water and mashed berries. Stir and cook until thick and clear. Remove from heat and add lemon juice. Chill. Just before serving, add sliced berries. Makes about 1½ cups sauce. Serve sauce on pie. 6 servings.

Juggle Lunch Menu To Avoid Monotony

By HILDA BEASTALL

Lunches to take for school or work reach the point of being number one problem of a homemaker's day. She knows, or he knows (since some fathers I know prepare lunch boxes) that nutrition must be packed into that small space.

I have wondered if it would work to have just five different menus and juggle them around between the five days to avoid monotony.

Since most carried lunches are based on a sandwich, be sure that the bread is a good wholewheat, homemade from your own ingredients if at all possible. Less will be eaten since it is more satisfying. Buy unsliced bread. It costs less for a loaf. It is more economical too because you slice according to need and appetite, so won't have youngsters leaving half a sandwich they can't manage to get down.

The fillings should be chosen for first class nourishment in a condensed form, and most of it should be chosen for protein of some kind. The other nutrients will be present. If it can be mixed with a fruit or vegetable so much the better. It must be reasonably moist without becoming soggy.

Avoid spicy seasonings, relish, pickles or mayonnaise, for these create thirst during the afternoon and add little food value.

A few general tips on sandwich making, and then for a few fillings as suggestions for each of you to adapt to your own needs.

Vary the basic spread by adding finely-chopped parsley, chives of onion to the margarine or butter. Cream together until it is easily spread. Sometimes in place of margarine, use the old-fashioned kind of peanut butter without salt or sugar.

Vary the kind of bread — rye, wholewheat, corn, pumpernickle, or one you make yourself of oats, soy flour, or rice.

Use a yeast recipe as for the Lunch Buns below to make something different at least once a week; they will take either meat, cheese, or fruit fillings. But you can just as easily make small fancy shapes of twists and crescents from the same recipe, and these go with fresh fruit or salads even without butter.

Do spread the butter or margarine right to the edges to avoid dry areas, and also the filling. And don't on any account cut off the crusts. Not only is crust of good bread the best tasting of the loaf, but it affords healthful exercise for teeth and gums and adds a bit of necessary roughage to the fine textured sandwich filling.

Cut sandwiches in sizes according to the size of those expected to eat them — grade one and two youngsters have small hands compared to mother and father.

Wrap sandwiches very closely in waxed paper to exclude air which dries them, and then put into a pliofilm bag. Many families find it necessary to make up sandwiches overnight, while others set a schedule for preparing them immediately after breakfast for those who don't leave home until eight or after.

For those who like peanut butter (most men and children love it; if the old-fashioned kind without salt and sugar it is high food value). Use it without margarine, with fillings such as sliced or chopped eating apple sprinkled with lemon juice to preserve vitamins.

Peanut butter on the bread, and a filling of grated raw carrot sprinkled at once with lemon juice to prevent vitamin loss, and mixed with a few cut up raisins is another good sandwich.

Avocado is a complete food if you eat a whole one, but a quarter section, mashed, sprinkled with lemon juice and chopped nuts (not salted) between two slices of wholewheat bread makes a good lunch.

Some fillings can be kept in small glass jars with tops, in the refrigerator ready for use — cut-up raisins, chopped dates, chopped or grated nuts, a margarine mix with parsley.

Homemade meat loaves, sliced when cold, are usually a lot moister, and certainly more satisfying and cheaper than bought lunch meats.

MEAT LOAF FOR LUNCHES

1 cup raw hamburger (minced beef)
1 slice fat bacon, chopped (optional)
½ cup rolled wheat
1 tsp salt
1 tbsp brewer's yeast
¼ cup finely diced celery and leaves
¼ cup finely diced carrot
1 tsp finely chopped onion
1 cup water
1 tsp dark molasses

Cook the prepared vegetables in the water until just fork tender. Meanwhile mix meat, bacon, brewer's yeast, wheat and salt together in a loaf pan or casserole. Add a half cup of vegetable stock from another day, or water. Heat through on stove top.

Mash vegetables slightly with fork; add molasses to darken.

Add vegetables to heated meat, mixing thoroughly. Smooth top. Cover to prevent hard crust forming, and bake in 300 degs. oven for 1 hour.

The mixture should simmer very gently for that period.

This makes a moist, tasty, nutritious meat loaf for many sandwiches or will serve four or five generously for supper with additional vegetables.

It has only a quarter pound of ground beef, with added protein from the wheat and brewer's yeast at lower cost.

A GREEN SANDWICH SPREAD

(For those who may not get enough green salad)
¼ cup fine celery with leaves
1 tbsp finely chopped parsley OR
¼ cup chopped chickweed leaves
½ tsp finely chopped mint
¼ cup grated cheddar cheese
¼ cup ground raw peanuts (not salted)

Mix well in bowl; add softened butter or margarine. Blend.

Spread between slices of wholewheat or rye bread.

LUNCH BUNS

¼ cup warm water
1 pkt. or 1 tbsp granular yeast
¾ cup warm water
1 tbsp demerara sugar
2 cups unbleached flour (approx)
1½ cups wholewheat flour
¼ cup skim milk powder
⅓ cup soft margarine
1 tbsp demerara sugar
½ tsp salt
2 small eggs

Measure warm water into large mixing bowl; sprinkle yeast over surface and let stand 10 minutes to dissolve until bubbly.

Stir in warm water, sugar and 2 cups flour. Beat well with spoon until smooth.

Cover with warm damp cloth, let rise until double, about 1 hour.

Now add wholewheat flour and powdered milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead a few times until smooth. Roll out to ½-inch thickness; cut with 2½-inch cutter.

Place on greased cookie sheet. Cover with towel and set to rise in warm place for about 30 minutes.

Bake at 350 degs. for about 20 minutes until lightly brown.

Makes 2 dozen buns, suitable for any time, from school lunches to entertaining.

Skating Star Keeps Cooking

Sashi believes anyone can cook. "All you have to do is try."

"We like touring very much," Denise continues. "In each city we always go to at least one good restaurant. This gives Sashi an opportunity to learn new techniques in cooking and serving.

"It is funny," says Sashi, "to see seaweed being sold here as a specialty or health food. In Japan it is a part of our basic 'diet.'" He recommends buying the high quality seaweed which is dark brown.

"The Japanese crepe is healthier in food value than our rich French crepes suzette," adds Denise, "but when we visit my home in Canada, Sashi always enjoys them, too. His recipes, however are always unique. Why not try this one!"

Sashi Kuchiki and wife Denise.

Quiche Lorraine, Tasty Appetizer

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE, and PIERRE FRANEY

NEW YORK — To many cooks, a quiche Lorraine, that savory concoction of onions, cheese, bacon (or ham), eggs and cream cooked in a flaky crust. But quiche is really the generic name for a host of nonsweet pies. One of the finest we know — an Alsatian meat pie — is made with ground veal or pork. It is an usually tasty appetizer or luncheon dish.

ALSATIAN MEAT PIE

Pastry for one 10-inch pie (see recipe for Alsatian pastry).

1 pound lean leg or shoulder of veal, ground, or use an equal quantity of ground lean pork.

2 teaspoons butter.

1 ½ tablespoons finely chopped shallots.

1-3 cup finely chopped onion.

⅓ cup finely chopped mushrooms (about one-eighth pound).

1 whole egg.

1 egg yolk.

1 cup heavy cream.

1. Line a 10-inch tart tin (preferably a black, fluted-edge quiche pan with a removable bottom) with the pastry and chill it.

2. Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

3. Sprinkle the veal and-or pork with salt and pepper to taste and the nutmeg.

4. Heat the butter in a skillet and add the shallots and onion. Cook, stirring, until wilted and add the mushrooms. Cook five minutes, stirring frequently. Add the meat, stirring and breaking up lumps of meat with the side of a large metal spoon. Cook until most of the liquid is given up.

5. Beat the egg and yolk with a fork until well blended and add the cream, salt and pepper to taste. Blend well and add the mixture to the meat. Stir well.

6. Pour the mixture into the prepared pie shell and bake 15 minutes. Reduce the oven heat to 350 degrees. Bake 30 to 35 minutes longer or until the custard is set. Remove from the oven and let stand. Serve lukewarm or at room temperature.

Yield: Eight servings.

ALSATIAN PASTRY

2½ cups flour.

¼ pound butter.

Salt.

6 tablespoons well-chilled corn oil.

6 tablespoons cold milk, approximately.

1. Put the flour in a mixing bowl and place it in the freezer. Place the butter in the freezer and let both stand for half an hour or longer.

2. Remove the flour and cut the butter into bits adding it to the flour. Add salt to taste. Using the fingers or a pastry blender, cut the butter into the flour until mixture is like coarse corn meal.

3. Gradually add the oil, stirring with a two-pronged fork. When blended, add the milk gradually, working the pastry with the hands until it forms a dough. Knead briefly and gather the dough into a ball. Wrap it in wax paper and chill at least 30 minutes.

4. Remove the dough from the refrigerator and place it on a lightly floured surface. Roll it out into a rectangle measuring about 12-by-6 inches.

5. Fold one-third of the dough over toward the center. Fold the other side of the dough over toward the center, thus making a three-layer package of dough. Cover and refrigerate about half an hour.

6. Roll out the dough once more on a lightly floured surface, sprinkling the surface with additional flour as necessary. Roll it into another rectangle. Fold the dough into thirds as before, cover and chill. The dough is now ready to be rolled into a circle for fitting into a 10-inch metal tart tin (preferably a black, fluted-edge quiche pan).

Meat Storage Tips

Keep it cool; keep it clean; keep it covered. Follow these simple rules for the handling and the storage of meat, and you'll be sure of wholesome food with maximum flavor.

—Fresh roasts should be wiped with a damp cloth, placed on a dry plate and covered loosely with waxed paper. They will keep two to three days.

—Ground meat should be used within two days of purchase while smoked or cured meats such as ham and bacon should be used within one week.

—Poultry should be covered loosely with waxed paper and cooked within two to three days. If giblets are enclosed in the neck or body cavity, remove them and store separately as they spoil more rapidly than the rest of the bird.

—Unopened vacuum-packed meats such as frankfurters, bologna, salami and ham will keep safely for 5 to 7 days in the refrigerator. Once the package is opened, use immediately.

Cheap Meat Cuts in Disguise 'Pan-Licking' Good

By JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH

"Unfortunately," says Nancie Russell, "we're not all vegetarians. Some people—and my man, Otho, is one of them — just can't eat a meatless dinner and leave the table feeling satisfied. Which means that — on our income — it now takes a lot of fancy figuring to get some meat on our plates every day."

Nancie Russell, in otherwords, has the same problem that most U.S. and Canadian families currently share. And, like the rest of us, she's developed some special ways of transforming the cheapest cuts of meat into dishes that are good enough to set before anyone. "Don't feel that you have to cook something expensive when you invite friends over for dinner," she says. "The following concoction ras never failed to totally freak out our guests . . . and they always demand the recipe."

SWEET AND SOUR MEATBALLS

In the morning, combine one pound of hamburger, one-half cup whole-wheat bread crumbs, a can of diced water chestnuts (optional), four chopped scallions, a clove of minced garlic, a beaten egg and a couple of tablespoons of tamari. Let this mixture sit in the refrigerator until you're ready to cook it.

Roll the meat mixture into marble-sized balls, coat them with cornstarch, dip them in beaten egg and then roll the pellets in cornstarch once more. Deep-fry the meatballs until they're golden and keep them warm in a 250-degree oven.

Drain two or three 8-ounce cans of unsweetened pineapple chunks (two if you're pinching pennies and three if you're splurging). Reserve the juice and combine it with one teaspoon of dry mustard, one teaspoon grated ginger root, one tablespoon of lemon juice or cider vinegar, one tablespoon brown sugar and a pinch of salt. Set the liquid aside.

In a heavy skillet, saute' four green peppers (cut into small squares) and four carrots (sliced into julienne strips) until the color of the vegetables has brightened, not dulled. They should be very crisp. Add the meatballs and the pineapple-juice mixture and — while they're warming — make a thin paste from three tablespoons of cornstarch and some water.

As soon as the juice gets hot, stir in the cornstarch paste a little at a time until the sauce has thickened to a nice glaze. Stir in the pineapple chunks and spoon the creation lovingly over plenty of brown rice.

Nancie says: "This recipe feeds four generously, but I've found that people will eat as much as I can make and then lick the pan when it's all gone. Eat with joy!"

Ms. Russell points out that everyone loves chicken and — as expensive as it is nowadays — it's still one of the least costly meats you can buy. "I have many recipes that stretch chicken such a country mile that — for special holiday treats — I can occasionally serve this economical meat in a more expensive (and absolutely delicious!) manner.

CHICKEN WITH NUTS

Stir-fry for a few minutes half a pound of walnuts or almonds (if you're really celebrating) or skinned, unsalted peanuts (if you're tightening up) and then remove them from the pan. Be sure to take the almonds and walnuts out before they darken or they'll be bitter.

Next, stir-fry two chicken breasts — skinned, boned and cut into chunks — until they're no longer pink. Push them to one side of the pan, slice four stalks of celery on the diagonal and stir-fry the celery until it's bright green.

Put the nuts back in the pan, add two cups of chicken broth and stir in cornstarch paste to thicken the liquid when the mixture gets hot. Serve immediately with brown rice. This dish feeds four.

If you can't even afford chicken these days — let alone almonds — Nancie has yet another delicious trick up her sleeve. "If you have a few pennies to invest in pork neck bones, you can still feast on one of my very favorite budget stretchers."

SPLIT PEA SOUP

Boil a pound of smoked pork neck bones for an hour in a large pot that's three-quarters full of water. Then wash one pound of split peas and add them to the pot together with an onion studded with cloves, two chopped onions, two cloves of minced garlic and a bay leaf.

Cover the pot and cook the peas over low heat until they're tender. Add salt, pepper and more water if necessary. This satisfying soup feeds four as is . . . and will still taste rich if diluted enough to serve eight.

Nancie Russell, of course, has many other dollar-squeezing recipes: Ham Hocks and Beans, Red Beans and Rice, Lentil Soup, Chili, Stuffed Peppers, Liver and Onions, Sweet and Sour Chicken, Chop Suey, Lamb Stew, Stir-Fried Hamburger with Vegetables, Black Bean Soup, Batter-Fried Chicken Livers, Lemon Chicken, Red Wing Stew and Oxtail Ragout . . . to name just a few.

Most of Ms. Russell's recipes can be prepared for even less than the first two dishes described above. It is nice to know, however, that truly memorable meals — such as Sweet and Sour Meatballs — can be prepared for only a few cents more than the cost of "plain ole hamburger again."

For a total of 34 of Nancie Russell's budget-stretching recipes, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope in care of this paper to The Mother Earth News, c-o Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas.

We regret that if the self addressed envelope is not stamped, the order will not be filled. Ask for Reprint No. 126, "Cheap Meat."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thurs., Dec. 12:

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on how you view your own potential. Key is to be confident, independent innovative. Means heed your own counsel — dance to your own tune. Leo, Aquarius individuals could be in picture. Your philosophical concepts may undergo radical change. Don't fight it!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The mysterious, the occult, the inexplicable — all come together. You don't have all the answers — but, most important, you realize it. What you need will come together. Aquarius, Leo figure prominently. You're on the way!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may find that what starts as a "friendly discussion" climaxes in serious disagreement. Highlight versatility. Be willing to laugh at your own foibles. You are in process of expanding personal horizons. Mate, partner is not feeling up to par.

CANCER (June 21-Julp 22): Highlight frankness. If you tell the truth — under fire — you emerge victorious. Know it and respond accordingly. Some pressure is to be expected. But in long run this can work in your favor. Scorpio person figures in unique manner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some of your desires are subject to revision. Changes occur, largely due to emotional reactions of others. One whom you are attracted to returns the favor — but suffers feelings of doubt. Take it in stride. Don't be drawn into foolish dispute.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Concern with family affairs could dominate. Some conflict is indicated. If you are diplomatic, the "storm" blows over. Keep track of budget; take inventory. Basic conclusions are reached but may not be what they appear.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Trying to bring chaos out of confusion could prove a fruitless task. Key is to wait, to defer, direct action. Neighbors, relatives deliver conflicting messages, instructions. Persons who issue threats do so now out of fear. Know it and maintain balance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Protect valuables. Conserve assets. Some persons would like to be careless—at your expense. Be aware of it and keep guard in place. Accent is on collections payments and recovery of losses. One in authority will lend support.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be drawn in two directions. Key is to choose path which permits greatest degree of personal freedom. Refuse to carry burden not rightly your own. Aries, Libra could be involved. Remember that you have life of your own to live. Live it!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some may be scheming — behind your back. Key is to assert yourself, to show you are not without allies. Make clear that you have strength and will not take the count without doing battle. This could cause some to change their plans — in your favor. Do it!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Two friends, one introspective and the other aggressive, may make separate requests. Refuse to be caught in middle — accent your own self-esteem. The one who really cares will understand. Don't be concerned about the other!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Policies are subject to change. Don't feel you are painted into corner. Break loose. One in authority will understand and actually be grateful. This is period of transition. Know it and act accordingly.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have sense of humor, more so than most persons. You are completing a cycle—next year you will begin project and be more independent. July will be your most significant month. You are fond of travel, have wit and are capable of communicating through advertising, publishing. Gemini persons play important roles in your life.

dear abby

Hateful Mother

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl and my problem is my mother. I hate her. It may sound terrible to you, but I really hate her. I used to think I would get over it, but I know now I never will.

Sometimes I think I will go out of my mind if she doesn't quit picking on me. I never do anything to suit her. She doesn't like my clothes, my hair, my friends or anything.

My friends are not bums, either. They are good kids and they aren't wild or on pot or anything like that, but my mother says they look like hippies, and they aren't.

Please help me, Abby, before I run away from home. I cry myself to sleep at night because my mother is so hateful. If I babysit, she makes me put the money in the bank. Other girls can buy records or do whatever they want with the money they earn.

Don't tell me to talk to my father. He's always on her side. And don't tell me my mother "loves" me and is only doing things for my own good. If you print my letter, don't sign my name or I'll get killed." — Miserable

DEAR MISERABLE: Your letter doesn't shock me at all. I receive many such letters each week. Almost every normal teenager alternately loves and hates his parents.

It's not easy to be criticized, restricted, corrected, and disciplined day in and day out. But parents who really love their children, prove it by consistently letting their children know what is expected of them. Parents who are "soft" and permissive rear confused, insecure children.

I don't expect you to agree with me today, but keep this letter and read it again three years from now, and then you'll understand it perfectly. Good luck, dear. You're lucky. You are loved."

Fresh Beets Vitamin C Source

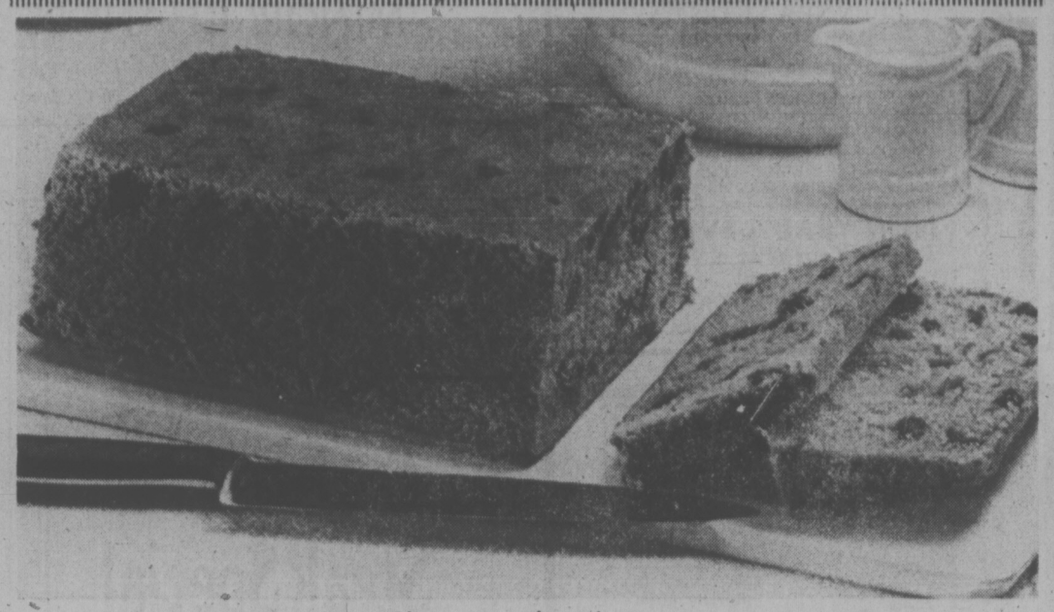
Everybody likes pickled beets, but we tend to forget fresh beets. Beets are a good source of vitamin C. For maximum quality, choose Canada No. 1 beets that are smooth and firm with no dark spots or ridges. Avoid soft, flabby roots since they normally are poor in flavor. Beets are best when 1½ to 2¾ inches in diameter. When allowed to grow larger than this, they sometimes become tough and woody.

To retain more of their bright red color, beets should always be cooked in their jackets with the tap root intact and about 1 inch of their tops. This prevents "bleeding." They can be boiled as is 15 to 18 minutes for small, 24 to 30 minutes for medium and 30 to 60 minutes for large. They can also be peeled, sliced thin and cut in fingers, then "panned" in butter 18 minutes; or pressure cooked whole (not more than 1½ inches in diameter) 8 minutes.

BEETS WITH RED CABBAGE

¼ cup water
¼ cup vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon caraway seed
2 cups shredded red cabbage
1 pound beets cooked, peeled and sliced
2 tablespoons butter
Dairy sour cream (optional)

Combine water, vinegar, salt, caraway seed in frypan and bring to boil. Add cabbage. Cover and simmer until just tender (about 5 minutes). Add beets and butter. Stir and cook until beets are heated through. Serve with sour cream if desired. 6 servings.



Christmas cake substitute.

Fruit Cake for Diet-Conscious

By MARY MOORE

We think we have come across a fruit bread that will appeal to a large section of our reader friends.

For one thing it could be a substitute for rich Christmas fruit cake for those who do not want or cannot have rich food for reducing or health reasons.

Another thing — it is moist and full of flavor and is ideal to freeze so you can double the recipe and put one away for entertaining time in a few weeks.

FESTIVE FRUIT BREAD

½ c. butter or margarine (room temperature)
½ c. light brown sugar (packed)
½ c. corn syrup
2 eggs
1 c. smooth applesauce
1 c. raisins
1 c. mixed fruit cake fruits
2¼ c. unsifted all-purpose flour
3 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. nutmeg
¼ tsp. ground cloves

Butter a 9x5x3" loaf pan. Line bottom with buttered wax paper.

In bowl cream together butter and sugar. Stir in corn syrup. Add eggs, blending until smooth. (Mixture may appear curdled.) Stir in applesauce, rasins and mixed fruit cake fruits.

In another bowl stir together flour, baking powder, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves. Add to creamed mixture and mix until thoroughly combined and smooth. Turn into prepared pan, push into corners and smooth top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 1¼ hours or until done when tested with toothpick.

Some of you know this sugar story. Others who have joined our cooking club during this past decade will not: I am telling it because of the current crisis and prices on the sugar market.

When sugar was rationed early in the '40s due to the Second World War, I was asked to make products that substituted corn syrup for sugar.

The cake below is the result of many weeks of trial and error. When I made the cake this morning I made it from corn syrup bought yesterday at 52c for a 2-pound can. That beats 65c per pound for sugar which is the price as I write this column.

Please note too that the frosting is not made with icing sugar. It is a real innovation. I hope our venturesome bakers will give this a whirl. I expect it to stir up quite a few of you to going back to cake baking.

CORN SYRUP CAKE WITH CUSTARD FROSTING
(no sugar)

4 egg whites (yolks are used in frosting — see below)
1½ c. corn syrup
1 c. margarine (room temperature)
1 c. milk
1 tsp. vanilla
1 c. corn starch (yes one cup)
2 c. sifted cake-and-pastry flour
4½ tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt

Beat whites until very stiff, then add corn syrup and beat for 30 seconds. Set aside.

Sift together the corn starch, flour, baking powder and salt. In another beater bowl cream the room temperature margarine until light. Stir in the milk and vanilla. (It does not blend well). Add 1 cup of the flour mixture and beat in. (It now begins to resemble a batter.) Remove beaters. Add alternately the egg-white-corn-syrup mixture and remaining flour stirring with a wire whisk until blended. Pour into 13x9" pan lined on bottom with buttered wax paper. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 30 minutes. Let stand in pan 5 minutes then turn out on cake rack to cool. Peel off wax paper at once.

To make CUSTARD FROSTING mix together well in a small saucepan 1-3 cup corn syrup, ¼ cup flour, 4 egg yolks (left over from making corn syrup cake), ¼ teaspoon salt. Now stir in 1 cup milk and cook stirring constantly until thick. Remove from heat, add vanilla and let cool. (As you can see this is a Custard Filling you could use in layer cakes or cream puffs or eclairs.)

Measure 2 tablespoons desiccated coconut onto a piece of wax paper. Sprinkle with ¼ teaspoon yellow food coloring. With your fingers mix coloring into coconut. Let dry for a few minutes.

Please do not try to substitute or change this recipe in any way. It is the result of a lot of testing and should not be tampered with — but it is a beauty you will treasure.

'MINOR' CHANGES IN CHANNEL LINK

PARIS (Reuter) — France has agreed to minor changes in the timetable for building a channel tunnel between France and England.

In replying to a British proposal that work on the tunnel be slowed down, the French government made clear it still wants to build the link under the English Channel..

Britain had proposed delaying heavy expenditure on the project — to be completed by 1980 — as an economy measure, and to prevent further feasibility studies.

Transport Secretary Marcel Cavaille said in a statement France would agree to minor changes in the target dates for building various stages of the tunnel, on which preliminary work has already begun.

But the statement implied that France still hopes the tunnel will be in service by 1980.

"One cannot talk of a delay in completion of the tunnel, even less of abandoning it," he said.

Macdonald Unfazed By U.S. Threats

OTTAWA—Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday he doubts if the U.S. government will impose taxes on Canadian oil that crosses U.S. soil.

The minister said he has no intention of talking with Washington about a bill introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives to tax such oil shipments.

"It sounds like the same sort of proposition made by some senators recently," the minister said. "I agree with the prime minister's comments on the matter."

During a visit to Washington last week, Prime Minister Trudeau said he did not take the proposal seriously. Canada could match any new U.S. tax by raising its export levy, he said.

Sponsors of the bills in both Houses of Congress are reported to be prearing to press hard for support from fellow legislators for their bills through circulars of public hearings.

No concrete action is expected on either proposal until the new Congress sits in January.

And neither sponsor was claiming so far to have attracted support from the leadership of either Republican or Democratic parties—a crucial factor if the bills are to have any hope of passing.

Although there has been no official comment from the Ford administration about the moves, informed sources say the idea of retaliating against Canada would probably be strongly opposed by the state department and the White House.

FREEDOM ENDS IN SHOOTOUT

MONTREAL (CP) — Edgar Roussel's 6½-week battle to evade capture ended Tuesday when the 28-year-old fugitive from St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary was caught after a shootout with police in suburban Verdun.

Roussel was serving seven years for holdups and escapes when he and four other men broke out of the maximum-security prison Oct. 23 using weapons smuggled into the visitors' room by two women.

Roussel was captured following a bank holdup in which two armed men took $7,000. The pair, chased by two police constables who ordered them to surrender, were unable to reach a getaway car.

One eluded capture by scrambling into another apartment building, while the other sought refuge in an unoccupied house which police surrounded.

Several shotgun blasts were fired through a wall in a room where the fugitive, later identified as Roussel, was hiding. Shortly afterwards, he surrendered.

Roussel escaped from prison along with Richard Blass Pierre Vincent, Jean-Paul Mercier and Robert Frappier. All but one had previous escape records.

Mercier, 28, died in hospital Nov. 1 after he was shot during an abortive bank holdup in which Frappier, 27, was also shot. Frappier later recovered and was returned to prison.

Blass, serving 15 years for attempted murder, armed robbery, assaulting a police officer and car theft, and Vincent are still at large.

Both Blass and Roussel attracted national attention last month when they demanded in a letter to Solicitor-General Warren Allmand that reporters be permitted to visit Cellblock One at the penitentiary. A tour was arranged.

SALMON CATCH DOWN BY 75%

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Puget Sound commercial fishermen this season caught less than one-fourth as much salmon as they landed last year says U.S. Rep. Lloyd Meeds.

In a statement released by his Washington, D.C., office, the Washington Democrat said latest figures show that the catch of coho, pink and chum salmon by non-Indian fishermen fell from 479,104 in 1973 to 110,182 this year.

Purse seiners caught $180,000 worth of fesh this season in an area where they caught $1.6 million last year, he said.

"Washington's third largest renewable resource industry, fishing, is in serious trouble," Meeds said. "For both full-time and part-time commercial fishermen on Puget Sound, this is a long, cold winter."

Non-Indian commercial fishermen were permitted to fish four days this season, compared with 18 last year under a federal court decision guaranteeing Indians the right to catch one-half of the harvestable, off-reservation runs.

$180,000 worth of fish this sea-

Justice Workshop Set

A nine-member steering committee to form a justice council for the Capital Regional District Monday night tentatively set Feb. 5 for the date of a public meeting or "workshop."

The committee has decided to defer the formation of the council until after such a meeting to give everybody a chance to speak on how the council should be organized.

The B.C. Justice Department Commission has recommended creation of regional and local councils which will bring justice personnel and interested citizens together to work out mutual problems.

Committee president Tony Gascoyne, director of alternative projects at the Victoria Boy's Club, said today he was pleased with the efforts made to date.

"We are making cautious but positive progress," he said.

Bay Opens Doors

WINNIPEG (CP) — An investigation by the Manitoba Human Rights Commission into charges that The Bay department store was guilty of sexist discrimination has resulted in a new open door policy.

Marilyn Bursten, a Winnipeg secretary, said she had been rudely ejected from an exclusively male section of the store and filed complaints with the commission, a consumer's bureau, and the store manager.

In a statement released Tuesday, The Bay indicated changes will be made in the shop's format.

"Investigative officers of the Manitoba Human Rights Commission indicated to The Bay that a shop which discriminated on the basis of sex was in violation of a section of the Human Rights Act."

The statement added the revised shop will be "everybody's shop and women are welcome."

A spokesman said earlier that the shop was established to enable male shoppers to shop for women's merchandise without embarrassment.

New TV Station

WINNIPEG (CP) — CanWest Broadcasting Ltd. has announced the call letters CKND-TV will be used for Winnipeg's new television station.

CanWest has been licensed by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to establish the station which is expected to go on the air next fall on Channel 9.

Arena Gas Countered

EDMONTON (CP) — Machines used to clear ice on indoor arenas in Edmonton will be changed to eliminate or reduce suspected unsafe emissions of carbon monoxide gas, Parks Superintendent Jack Boddington said Tuesday.

The parks and recreation department will install catalyfic converters on all but two ice-maintenance machines which will be converted to propane.

Powers Questioned

EDMONTON (CP) — Provincial Ombudsman Randall Ivany said Tuesday he is opposed to Child Welfare Act provisions that give welfare workers broad powers over children taken into provincial care.

The act allows welfare authorities to keep child and parent separated for up to 20 days without a court appearance.

Dr. Ivany said he is unhappy with the legislation "on general principles" and plans to study the powers of welfare authorities.

Inches From Disaster

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — The Ministry of Transport has completed an investigation of an incident last week in which a 44-passenger aircraft came within inches of disaster.

Airport officials have said the $1.5-million plane, owned by Gateway Aviation of Edmonton, scraped its right propeller on the runway Thursday when its pilot neglected to lower the landing gear.

The pilot has not been identified and an MoT spokesman declined to disclose conclusions of the MoT investigation.

Contact with the runway bent back eight inches of each of the propeller's bladed tips.

Extortion Attempt Fizzles

CALGARY (CP) — City police are investigating an attempt to extort $3,000 from a couple who found a note containing a bomb threat in their home last week.

The couple told police that when they returned to their unlocked home they found the note, marked "personal," in the master bedroom.

It said the house had been broken into and that a small bomb had been hidden somewhere inside. The note instructed the couple to put $3,000 in a bag and leave it at a Calgary garbage bin.

The note said that if the couple followed the instructions, they would receive a phone call telling them where the bomb was hidden.

They searched the house and called police but found no sign of a bomb. Police staked out the garbage bin but no one showed up looking for money.

Shotgun Guard Won't Be Charged

BURNABY (CP) — A night watchman who fired three shotgun blasts at robbery suspects Sunday night will not be charged, RCMP indicated Tuesday.

Staff-Sgt. Paul Starek of the Burnaby RCMP detachment said one of the men fired at, who had 16 pellets removed from his body, likely will be charged with attempted theft.

A second person believed hit by pellets has not been found and a third suspect escaped unscathed.

Staff-Sgt. Starek said the shooting reflects the growing concern of some members of the public with the more lenient attitudes of courts and legal authorities to law violations.

"More and more, people are resorting to guns to protect their properties against criminals, who are freed because the leniency extended by the courts," he said.

The watchman's employer, Active Bailiff Service, has been bothered recently by thefts and attempted thefts, Staff-Sgt. Starek said.

"Active (bailiff services) has lost thousands of dollars of goods and I guess they just got sick and tired of it," he said.

Anthony Pantages of the Canadian Bar Association's criminal justice committee, said the use of firearms by civilians can only be justified where the threatened person feels his life is in danger.

"I'm against people taking the law into their own hands, except under the most extraordinary of situations," Pantages said.

Did Police Beat Up Girl, 14?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the Vancouver police department confirmed Tuesday that police are investigating a charge that an officer beat a 14-year-old girl last week, breaking her collarbone.

Staff Sgt. R. J. Cumming said the investigation was requested by Victor Belknap, superintendent of child welfare.

She and another girl are accused of stealing a car last Thursday and are reported to have been chased by police at speeds up to 90 miles an hour before the car hit a fire hydrant.

The girl said she was not injured in the collision but that one of the two officers dragged her out of the driver's seat and beat her causing the injury.

Landlord Grumble Line Clogged

VANCOUVER (CP)—After the first week of operation, the provincial Rent Review Commissioner's office is receiving about 200 calls a day.

Commissioner Bruce McCullough said most callers simply want ot know if a provincial 10.6-per-cent rent increase limit applies to them.

"Most of the landlords of large blocks are okay—they're abiding by the law although they're grumbling," McCullough said.

"But there are some small, independent landlords who are either ignorant of the regulations or are deliberately flaunting them. Some landlords are trying to bluff their tenants.

"I think some must be former poker players. They haven't got the hand so they're trying to bluff," McCullough added.

One of the early callers at his office was a Fraser Valley landlord with an eye blackened by a tenant. This landlord, McCullough said, had made likely a bad financial move when he purchased the apartment and now must have higher-than-allowed rent increases or face bankruptcy.

HOT TOPIC COOLED

BURNABY (CP)—A fire marshal temporarily put out the hot issue of sex education in area schools when more than 100 persons tried to attend a regularly-scheduled school board meeting Tuesday.

Board chairman Betty Clark told the Concerned Parents Action League, which opposes introduction of sex education in the schools, that a public meeting will be called for some time in January because the fire marchal had advised her that no more than 64 persons could be allowed in the school board chambers.

The board did, however, hear a brief from Wally Siemens, president of the league.

Siemens told the board that his group adamantly and vehemently opposed the introduction of the proposed family life and sex education program in the schools.

"We have no sex hang-ups but we object to the schools usurping our rights in this area and invading our homes," said Siemens.

Any sex education probram couldn't escape the teaching of morals and only the parent could judge when their children are ready for the subject, he added.

Mrs. Clark promised that no new program would be introduced at least until after the public meeting in January. Any program would also be dependent upon approval of the parents, she said.

HYDRO HEADS TO HUDDLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro directors are to meet Friday to discuss what the crown corporation should do about a court ruling that could cost it millions of dollars in additional Peace River power project costs.

Mr. Justice J. A. Macdonald of the B.C. Supreme court ruled Monday that Hydro violated its contract with a consortium of builders of the project.

Big Drug Peddler Deported

KAMLOOPS (CP) — One of the 10 most-wanted men in the United States, Benjamin Smith, 32, was deported from Canada Tuesday.

Smith was serving 10 to 15 years for smuggling drugs into the United States when he fled from the federal penitentiary in Latuna, Tex., this fall.

At that time, he threatened to kill the FBI agent responsible for his arrest and was considered armed and dangerous.

Kamloops RCMP said he flew into Canada aboard a private plane and was working in Kelowna under the alias of Jerry Olson when arrested Nov. 22.

Following an immigration hearing here Dec. 4, he was ordered deported. But just as officers were about to take him to a rendezvous with U.S. authorities, Smith staged what police said was a fake heart attack Monday.

While he was being checked at the hospital, a small sharp piece of metal was found in the seam of his shirt that police say could be used to pick handcuffs.

Maximum security precautions were undertaken to the border rendezvous with U.S. authorities near Oroville, Washington, today.

'Tis the Season To Be Wed

OKLAHOMA CITY — There will be no divorces during the Christmas season if Judge Raymond Naifeh has anything to say about it. A message posted on the doors to his courtroom says: "Notice. This court will not hear any divorce cases from Dec. 16 through Dec. 25, 1974. This moratorium is being declared for the purpose of keeping families together during the Christmas season."

NEW YORK — Lucien Rivard of Montreal, convicted drug smuggler who was the centre of an extradition battle nine years ago, will be released from prison next month and turned over to immigration authorities for deportation to Canada.

Rivard will be released Jan. 17 from federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., where he has been serving a 20-year term since 1965. He appeared before the Parole Board early in November.

LONDON — John Gordon, Scottish journalis who built up one of Britain's biggest-circulation newspapers with his abrasive style, died Monday, one day after his 84th birthday. Gordon, editor-in-chief of the right-wing Sunday Express regularly slammed what he considered the bunglings and bossiness of the British bureaucracy.

Born in Dundee in 1890 where he trained as a reporter, he joined The Sunday Express in 1928. He eventually pushed the circulation up to almost five million.

"It was simple," he oncesaid. "A newspaper editor must have a common-denominator mind. He must be an ordinary human being with ordinary interests who can reflect them in his paper."

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A black - and - white etching bought for $2.50 at a flea market by a college professor has turned out to be an original James McNeill Whistler etching worth $1,500. "I bought it because it looked like a good etching, and it was only $2.50," said Wade Hall.

LITTLE ROCK — A man who shot himself in the stomach during a sniping incident last weekend was in serious condition but alert today at the University of Arkansas Medical Centre. Mrs. Beverly Wood, public information officer for the hospital, said Barry Shirley, 26, was having a "great deal of pain" following surgery to remove the bullet from his stomach.

PHILADELPHIA — Siamese twins Clara and Alta Rodriguez are back in Children's Hospital here to recover from an intestinal virus. The 16-month-old sisters, joined at the pelvis since birth, were separated surgically on Sept. 18 and released from hospital Nov. 29.

WASHINGTON — The United States government made symbolic peace with Muhammad Ali Tuesday. Gerald Ford, commander-in-chief of the armed forces as well as president welcomed to the White House the heavyweight champion, who in 1967 refused induction on moral grounds as a member of the Black Muslim sect.

"My meetings with presidents of countries are completed now," Ali said, naming several other heads of state who had entertained him. He told Ford "You made a big mistake letting me come here, because now that I see it, I'm going to have to run for your job."

"Sometimes, with the problems I have, I think you can have it," Ford replied.

What the Luftwaffe Couldn't...

CANTERBURY (UPI) — Weather and polluted air threaten to accomplish what the Nazi Luftwaffe failed to do to Canterbury cathedral in Second World War bombing raids.

Archbishop of Canterbury Donald Coggan warned Tuesday that the cathedral — spiritual centre of the Church of England — is decaying from the ravages of time, weather and pollution.

He spoke in launching an appeal to raise $8.2 million to preserve the church. All the cash must be raised privately, he told newsmen, since the government cannot by law give money to the church.

POT CAN GET YOU BUSTED IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE

BOSTON (UPI) — Regular smoking of marijuana can lead to larger breasts in a small percentage of men and women, a Harvard medical school doctor said today.

"I would think the chances would be in the vicinity of 100-to-1, but that's purely cojecture," said Dr. John Harmon. The chance would be about the same for those who smoke pot often regardless of their sex, he added.

Harmon said he and another harvard physician had seen 16 male patients with enlarged breasts during the past two years and had operated on four of them to remove excess tissue.

"The largest breasts we've seen definitely look like a woman's," he said.

The case studies were also supported by laboratory tests in which rats developed larger breasts after being injected with THC, the ingredient which produces the "high" from marijuana smoking. The results were reported to the American College of Surgeons in October, he said.

"When the first patient came to us two years ago we naturally asked him what drugs he was taking. He said he wasn't taking any drugs but that he had smoked marijuana a lot," Harmon said. "From then on, the first thing we asked these patients was whether they smoked marijuana."

In all cases, he said, patients admitted smoking marijuana at least three times a week, and some smoked daily.

Mills Steps Down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After 16 years in the post, Rep. Wilbur Mills has decided to surrender the chairmanship of the House Ways and Means committee because of ill health, Speaker Carl Albert said Tuesday.

Mills made his decision on the advice of his doctor who is treating the 65-year-old democrat at Bethesda naval hospital for what was described as exhaustion, Albert said.

Even before the announcement — which was expected — Mills had lost considerable stature in the eyes of his peers after extensive publicity about his friendship with Annabel Battistella, a Washington stripper.

Albert, who spoke with Mills' doctor Tuesday, said no decision has been made on whether the 18-term lawmaker will resign from either the committee or from congress.

"He is not going to seek the chairmanship on the committee on ways and means," Albert told reporters. "The medical processes have not been completed and may not be for a while."

Taste Makes Waste

United Press International

Ten pounds of butter and a hundred pounds of meat find their way into garbage cans each week at New York's Les Champs restaurant. At Byram's restaurant in Richmond, Va., 10 to 15 pounds of untouched bread is thrown away daily.

Many restauranteurs agree that the U.S. could help feed the starving people of the world with what restaurant patrons leave on their plates, but most fear that customers would not go along with smaller portions.

"Food portions served in most restaurants far exceed the quantity we need," Dr. W. Stanley Mooneyham of World Vision International, a relief organization, said in a statement issued Monday in Washington.

"The amount of uneaten food we send back to restaurant kitchens could feed millions of hungry people."

He suggested restaurants give patrons a choice between regular and "children's" portions. The food saved, he said, would increase surplus food available for overseas aid and help stem inflation at home.

Mel Dansky, owner of New York's Les Champs restaurant, estimates that the restaurant throws away 100 pounds of meat and 10 pounds of butter each week.

That's more than two and a half tons of meat and a quarter of a ton of butter a year.

"A man can eat a 16-ounce steak but a woman can only eat twelve and a kid less. But we still serve everyone the same size steak," Dansky said.

George Spanos, owner of Byram's restaurant in Richmond, also cited waste.

"I throw away every night whole pieces of bread — maybe 10 or 15 pounds of it. It's a shame," he said.

Bernard Tohl of Hale restaurants in Los Angeles says the restaurants try to maintain a "healthy looking plate" and many people can't finish the food they are served.

"But we're caught up in it," he says, "Will it antagonize the customer if you cut it down? We have attempted to maintain this by increasing the price instead of cutting portions.

"If it would be the policy of the government to recommend what would be done we would welcome tthe recommendation rather than appear that we are cutting portions."

Lee Davis, head chef of Lawry's restaurant in Los Angeles, says there is waste in such things as bread and butter, but they have to be served because "if you don't give it to them they think we are going cheap. We would much rather raise prices than cut portions."

Buffet-style serving seems to invite waste.

"I've found when we serve in a free-style — like a buffet — it's fantastic what they throw away," said Ted Lance, manager of Morrison's Cafe at Frankfort, Ky.

He said the restaurant will serve 400 to 500 people in an average lunch hour and fill up two 30-gallon garbage containers.

Harry Moroni, owner of the Corona Care in Chicago, points to the take-home angle in doubting that a lot of food is wasted.

"The doggy bag business is a big business in this racket," he said. "If you let them, they take the fruit. But I don't let them. But they'll take a pork chop home with them. Some folks finish their meals and some don't. That's all."

No End To Food Cost Spiral

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. agriculture department says that despite a worsening recession, retail food prices in the United States may rise as fast during the first half of 1975 as they did this year.

Supermarket prices may go up at an annual rate of 15 per cent, "barring a sharp collapse in domestic and world demand," said J. Dawson Ahalt, a staff economist presenting the department's analysis of the food price outlook.

Ellen Zawel, president of the National Consumers Congress, said in response to Ahalt's report that "The prospects of another 15 to 20 per cent increase in food prices is mindboggling."

Food prices in the U.S. last year jumped 14.5 per cent and have increased about another 15 per cent so far this year.

"If weather co-operates in the U.S. and around the world, and economic activity weakens more than expected, production increases relative to demand growth could be quite large, leading to significant slowing in price levels," Ahalt said.

"Conversely, with world grain stocks at precariously low levels, another year of poor growing conditions, at a time when world food needs are expanding, could ignite a rapid pace of food price advances throughout 1975."

New Flaw Found

MONTREAL (CP)—A coin dealer said Tuesday he has found another flaw in the 1976 Olympic Games series of $5 coins. Real Gilbert said he found a coin with the map on the back tilted at about a 20-degree angle from the design on the other side. An official of the Olympic coins program in Ottawa said a few such coins are in circulation. Earlier 7,000 to 8,000 coins were minted with a wrong date.

9 IN MEMORIAM

PRETTE — In memory of a dear husband and father, Mr. Richard Prette.
Time speeds on, two years have passed
Since death its gloom its shadows cast.
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light,
We miss that light, and ever will,
His vacant place there is none to fill.
Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in heaven we will meet again.
—Mrs. Mary Prette and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

GARDENING

New Growth Lurks in Borders

The damp and chill of a Pacific coast garden in December can be penetrating even at 45 or 50 degrees F., but clothed against both, there are rewards awaiting discovery by observant gardeners. Perhaps one of the calming aspects of outdoor observations at this season is that those concerning normal growth do not demand action on our part.

After watching the spectacular dawn and sunrise on Sunday December 8, I poked around the edge of the winter heather border in search of bulbs which are usually well through the soil before the end of December.

Sure enough they were visible. The reason for mentioning these less common plants as they appear is to bring them to the notice of new gardeners and newcomers. Only on the milder portions of this coast is it possible for instance to have more than a token flower or two from any kind of plant or bulb in the December to January period. Since it is possible here, why not exploit the fact for the enrichment of all who have a garden?

The bulbs found now just showing points of green at soil level are those of the quite ordinary little trumpet Daffodil named Narcissus lobularis. The yellow trumpet will be about an inch long, backed by an almost white perianth; the height reaches four to five inches, quite fitting for these early species.

A much finer species loved by every gardener who grows it is Narcissus bulbocodium, having a wide spreading crown earning the common name of Hoop Petticoat daffodil. A variety of N. bulbocodium named romieuxii has a much larger expanded crown, pale yellow, and blooms a little later on three-inch stems. Bulbs are and have been available for years, but still are not seen in many gardens.

The species bulbs of narcissus increase fairly rapidly when given a suitable site. Then many flowers will open during several weeks. The site should be free from standing water in winter and able to dry out gradually from the time the narcissus leaves die down until fall rains encourage new roots to form on the bulbs.

One planting of N. romieuxli I have in mind was made in irregular drifts on a sloping grassy bank in full sunshine. The grass needed no cutting from November until early May since rock and gravel beneath prevented rank growth. While blooms and leaves were easily avoided in passage over the area, one or two mower runs were needed in May.

Noticed at the same time of discovering the narcissus, was the amount of growth on the wrapped leaves of the fall blooming colchicums. In many groups, they are three inches high, but still in the typical circular wrap. These are the bulbs which bloomed in August and September; now the leaves are showing, to expand when spring comes.

No protection is needed or desirable when you see tips of bulb growth coming through the soil. Flower buds will only emerge if the weather is suitable for them, and the preceding leaves provide sufficient protection. The only additional protection considered is a few twiggy pieces of evergreen in the ground nearby when threatened with a tough sounding official weather forecast.

Jail 'Force' Charges Probed

A disturbance in Wilkinson Road jail Sunday has prompted an investigation into inmates' allegations excessive force was used by guards.

One inmate, awaiting trial on a drug matter asked Judge William Ostler in provincial court Tuesday for help in charging a correction officer with assault. Another inmate intimated he was drafting a charge against a second guard.

However, the Victoria prosecution office said today no charges have been laid.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said he had been provided with a statement from inmate Kenneth Edwin Kruger 22, of Youbou, and "was considering it".

But, he said, no decision would be made until an investigation into the disturbance is completed by prison officials.

Kruger, charged with possession of LSD for the purpose of trafficking, was one of 13 inmates confined to a separate segregation area of the jail after 31 men in the awaiting trial wing refused to return to their cells 11:30 p.m. Sunday

Extra guards were called in and after a two hour confrontation the revolt was quelled.

Kruger said to Ostler the incident started as a "peaceful demonstration" aimed at allowing inmates more time outside.

He said the guards "came in with their billy clubs", and that he was led away to a cell five feet by six feet which he shared with two others

"When they take us out to go to the bathroom we have to walk through people's urine in our stocking feet," he complained.

Jail director S A L Hamblin denied Kruger's claim and said it was "ridiculous, completely incorrect" and added there was no evidence clubs were used

Kruger, Michigan-born, said he had seen U.S. Marine Corps brigs but "I've never seen anything like this in my entire life."

"I am a United States citizen and I would like to be deported immediately," he told Ostler.

Another inmate, Curtis William Christie, 18, of 1303 Gladstone, charged with the Oct. 15 stabbing death of Stanford Wray, 53, said he had a "few things to say" about the Sunday protest but was cut short by Ostler

"We have heard all that from Mr. Kruger," the judge said.

Hamblin said the inmates' complaints were unfounded. "Most of their statements don't really warrant an answer."

He said: "Certain people were well tutored before they appeared in court."

He described the prisoners' arument about not receiving enough "fresh air" as exaggerated.

"We try to get the men out every day but there is no way they will budge if the weather is bad."

He said the men can watch television from morning to 11:15 p.m. if they want and that there is gym exercise for them "almost every afternoon."

He denied claims by inmates that a prisoner had to be taken to hospital because of treatment from guards.

"There was one prisoner injured," he said. "But he was hit on the head with a chair thrown by another inmate at a guard."

Hamblin defended the guards' actions, and said there was "no way" prisoners were going to tell him how he should run the jail.

Asked if any disciplinary action would be taken against any of the guards he said "when we get it sorted out we'll have a look."

Obey Labor Act, Doctors Warned

The B.C. Government Professional Employees Association today critized efforts by provincial doctors to get out of a profession collective bargaining unit.

The association said the legislature has decided that 11 groups of self-licensing professionals, from agrologists to veterinarians, including doctors and dentists, should comprise one bargaining unit. This is set down in the Public Service Labor Relations Act.

"The decision was no more acceptable to the dentists or the engineers than it was to the physicians but the other 10 groups obeyed the law and formed one unit for purposes of collective bargaining," the association said.

This was done "without in any way weakening their ties with their respective professional associations and now they are nearing the conclusion of a first agreement."

What the doctors appear to require, the association said, "is that the association and the affected cabinet minister violate both the letter and the intent of the legislation under the threat of disruptive actions.

If the legislature wants to exclude provincial salaried doctors from the bargaining unit then the law can be amended but the association "will have no part in breaking the law and it will take appropriate steps to ensure that none of those whom it is certified to represent, doctors included, do so."

Hospital Board Crunch Day

Political pressures and planning principles clash head-on today at a meeting of the regional hospital board as long-delayed hospital development reaches a significant turn in the road.

The principle involved is that all hospitals in the Capital district should be developed through a co-ordinated plan by a newly-formed planning commission.

The political pressures stem from frustrating years of little action while the regional hospital board struggled — and failed — to get co-operative action from the hospitals themselves.

The issue now focusses on how an addition to the year-old Sanich Peninsula Hospital will be built.

Will it be part of the plan the new commission is about to start on?

Or will it be launched in isolation at the direct order of the regional hospital board, because the need is so great?

Board chairman Art Young, and a majority of the regional directors have so far opted for having the new planning commission handle the addition, together with all other hospital projects.

They argue that the delay, if any, will be a matter of a few weeks and without a regional plan no one knows just what sort of an addition should be built.

But the board has been under growing pressure from some members, notably Central Saanich director Jean Butler, some area citizens, like former regional hospital board chairman Jim Cumming, and provincial politicians Scott Wallace and Hugh Curtis, to move now.

They argue the new wing was planned for and promised, the need is great and more planning will only mean more delays of the inevitable.

The acute care wing to be added to the Saanich Peninsula Hospital is ultimately—to replace obsolete Resthaven Hospital in Sidney.

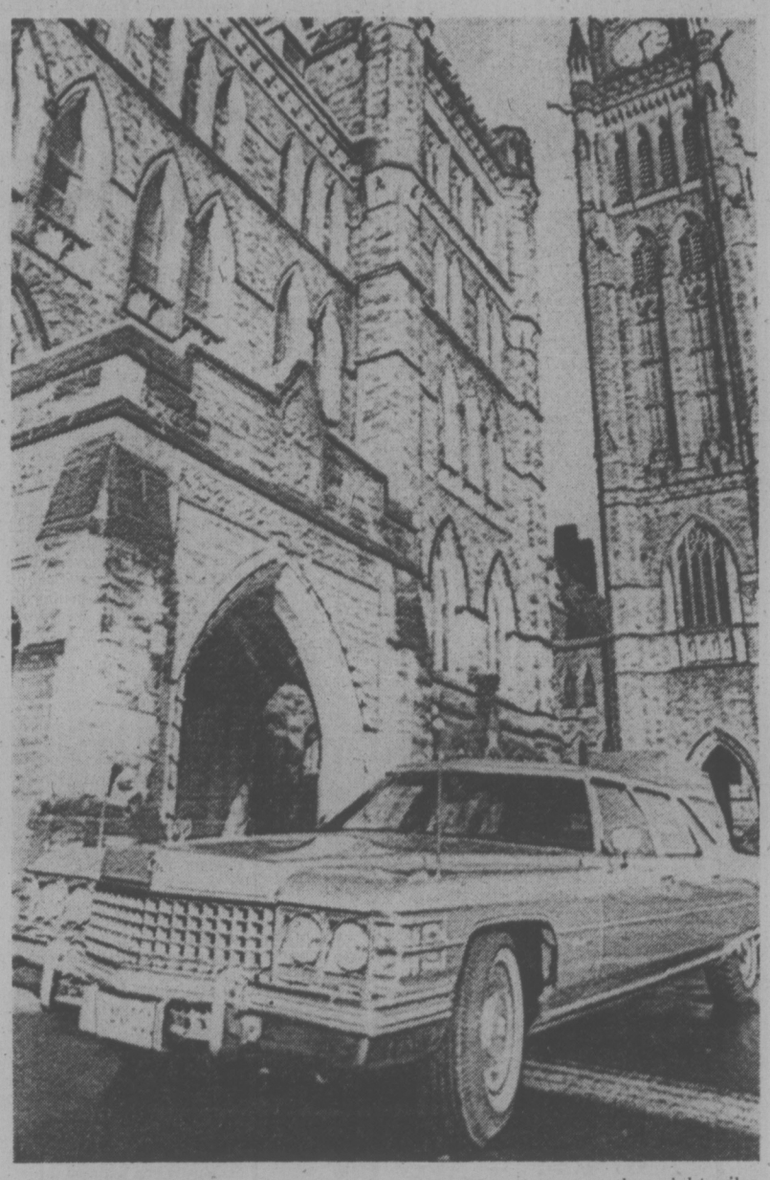
Dennis Young, executive director, said the regional hospital board must weigh these factors:

The addition of 75 acute care beds, the figure most frequently mentioned, to the Saanich Peninsula Hospital will likely cost between $4 million and $5 million, about a quarter of the funds available to modernize and expand the region's entire hospital system.

It will have little effect, if any, on the waiting lists at Victoria's two big general hospitals, each of which could spend all of the remaining money on massive renovations.

Meanwhile, how much pressure is there on the 58 beds at Resthaven Hospital? A check today shows the hospital is running at 77 per cent occupany, in contrast to close to 100 per cent for Victoria General and Royal Jubilee Hospitals.

Resthaven's beds include four maternity and nine pediatric beds. In addition to the total of 58 there are six bassinets.



NO COMPACT CAR, easy on the gas for Prime Minister Trudeau. Shown above is his new $80,000-plus Cadillac limousine which was delivered today. The heavily-armored vehicle is expected to get no more than eight miles to the gallon and replaces one delivered little more than a year ago which cost $75,000.

CARIBBEAN PREMIER OUSTED

Times News Services

ST. VINCENT — Premier James Mitchell of this tiny eastern Caribbean island has been toppled from office following an election sparked by a non-confidence motion from the party which he nominally headed.

Mitchell, a UBC graduate in agriculture, came to power two years ago after both official parties on the island wound up with six seats each in the 13-seat Parliament.

Elected as an independent, Mitchell than negotiated with both parties as to which he should join. His terms were simple: He would become premier. His offer was accepted by the People's Political Party.

The Labor Party, headed by former premier Milton Cato, won 10 of the 13 seats this time around and Ebenezer Joshwa's was reduced to two seats, one held by himself, the other by his wife Ivy, the government said.

Mitchell retained his seat.

Sugar Spies Fed Price Hike News

MONTREAL (CP) — Both "speculation" on world markets and "espionage" exist in the sugar refining industry, a witness said Tuesday at the trial of three companies charged with conspiracy to fix prices and lessen competition between 1960 and 1973.

Edwin Burgess, 56, marketing vice-president for Atlantic Sugar Refineries Co. Ltd., admitted his company showed a profit during those years although it absorbed freight rates not paid by its competitors.

"But profit in the sugar industry is often made in speculation on world sugar markets," Burgess told Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay of Court of Queen's Bench.

He said knowledge of price changes by Redpath Industries Ltd., Canada's national price-setter, were not gained by espionage, although "we did get information through espionage on other matters."

Redpath, St. Lawrence Sugar Ltd. and its associated SLSR Holdings Ltd., are charged jointly with Atlantic.

Burgess said others in the industry, such as brokers and shippers, would inform them of competitors' plans to change production levels or when a new company planned to begin operations.

But information on price changes by Redpath, to which Atlantic tried to tie its price, were received from customers, brokers or the local telegraph office.

Both Burgess and a later witness, Murray McEwan, 45, sales manager of St. Lawrence, said the local telegraph office would sometimes phone to say Redpath had increased prices.

St. Lawrence and Atlantic usually would tell the office to issue telegrams to customers announcing a corresponding change, they said.

Occasionally, when he issued a price change based on changes on the London daily market and Redpath did not change its price that day, Burgess said, he tried to call back telegrams.

He said Atlantic tried to keep its prices corresponding with those of Redpath "to avoid a price war." He testified earlier that such a war would not ensure any company a larger share of the market.

Burgess said his company decided "from our espionage" not to fight Cartier Sugar Ltd. when it began operations in Quebec in 1964, although Atlantic would lose sales.

Union Pay-Parity Claim Termed Only Red Herring

Wage parity between construction boilermakers and pipefitters is a "red herring" in the current boilermakers strike the president of Construction Labor Relations Association said Tuesday.

The 14-month contracts signed between the boilermakers union and 15 contractors outside CLRA "coincide with the national agreement that covers every province but Quebec and B.C.," said Chuck Connaghan, head of the bargaining agency for more than 800 B.C. contractors.

The boilermakers union is on strike against six CLRA contractors. Connaghan said 25 building sites and $100 million of construction have been affected, including the $4 million Woodward's expansion in Victoria.

No talks ahve been arranged by the two sides and neither group has asked for provincial government intervention as both sides appear to be digging in for a protracted dispute.

The boilermakers union has said the chief issue is wage parity, citing a gap of 46½ cents an hour in favor of pipefitters. The union said that until 1970 it had parity, or within a few cents of parity.

Connaghan didn't dispute the wage difference per hour but said the disparity was 3.9 per cent in favor of pipefitters in 1961 and has narrowed to 3.5 per cent.

"This problem we have got is very serious, when a small group can hold an industry to ransom," he said.

The other 17 building unions had signed two-year agreements with CLRA as opposed to 14-month agreements between the boilermakers and the non-CLRA contractors.

"If we break faith with the 17 unions we would set the collective bargaining scene back many years," he said.

He declined to speculate on the possibility of the provincial government initiating steps leading to a joint bargaining council of all building unions but reiterated CLRA's policy that all management and all unions should bargain at the same time.

"I don't think this (joint bargaining) is going to happen voluntarily," he said.

He noted that the government did act to force the elevator companies both to accept terms of a new contract recommended by an industrial inquiry commission and to become part of CLRA's bargaining, rather than the national bargaining which had existed.

One section of the Labor Code allows the Labor Relations Board to certify a council of unions as bargaining agent, including substitution of a council for existing individual union certifications.

Bob MacIntosh, international representative for the boilermakers union, said he doubted the government will initiate such a move.

And he predicted that if it did happen there "would be chaos, a general shutdown."

Any joint council would not be accepted by the boilermakers and likely also the electrical workers, plumbers and ironworkers, he said.

"If we are all in one group we could reject an agreement to a man but we could have it forced on us by others," he said.

There was no justification for the government to act in this case because the strike was "not interfering with the safety of the public and there's all kinds of building trades work."

EHRLICHMAN UNDER PRESSURE

Times News Services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Repeatedly reminding John D. Ehrlichman that he swore to "get the truth out," the chief cover-up prosecutor claimed today Ehrlichman told a grand jury 125 times that he could not recall or did not remember information about Watergate.

Prosecutor James Neal's cross - examination of the former White House domestic adviser immediately brought a series of objections from the defence and admonitions by Judge John J. Sirica.

Ehrlichman, who broke down on the stand Tuesday while recounting the time president Richard Nixon asked him to resign, acknowledged that he had from April 17, 1973, on to prepare for his grand jury appearances that May 3 and 9.

Neal then asked him if he had not said "I can't recall" or "I don't remember" 125 times in those appearances.

"I have no idea," Ehrlichman replied after his lawyer William Frates had objected to the question and Sirica himself told him to answer.

Frates frequently objected to Neal's questions on grounds that Ehrlichman had not been permitted to give a complete answer.

Neal replied, "it looks to me that if I'm going to do any talking this morning I'm going to have to interrupt."

Ehrlichman choked up Tuesday as he told of asking a tearful Nixon to explain to the Ehrlichman children why he was being fired.

Ehrlichman's tears were not the first that were shed during the trial, now 50 days old. But they were the most touching and left a hush over the crowded courtroom.

Testifying in his defence, Ehrlichman told how he and former White House Chief-of-Staff H. R. Haldeman drove to the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., on April 29, 1973, as the Watergate cover-up began to unravel.

"Haldeman told me the president had decided I should resign, and this meeting was for the purpose of talking about it," said Ehrlichman, the former chief domestic adviser.

"After a short wait, I was asked to come to aspen lodge," Ehrlichman said, adding that he and Nixon talked on the terrace and then inside.

"He said in substance that this was very painful for him," Ehrlichman said.

"How could you tell that?" Frates asked.

"In his demeanor. He broke down at one point and cried," Ehrlichman said.

"He said he regretted very much having to take this step. He said he felt I had been or tried to be his conscience. I replied I hadn't been as effective as I would have liked.

"He said that on reflection I had been right, and that he would like to help me with my attorneys' fees, if attorneys' fees were necessary. He had a large sum of money available to him.

"I told him I could not accept that offer. He asked if there was anything else he could do for me. I said that sometime I would like him to explain to our children . . ."

Ehrlichman broke down.

He whispered, "excuse me," took off his glasses, reached for a water glass and said again in a small voice, "excuse me."

Haldeman, no sign of emotion showing, looked at his old friend.

Whelan Likes 4-Letter Words

EDMONTON (CP) — Agriculture minister Eugene Whelan said Tuesday night he has qualms about at least two four-letter words.

He said there are a lot of four-letter words which, as a farmer, he recognizes as playing a major role in agriculture.

"They are love, hope, play, pray, work, eggs, beef, pork, oats, rape, corn—and they all add up to another four-letter word: food.

"But there are a couple of four letter words that I have reservations about—plum tree."

Beryl Plumptre is chairman of the Food Prices Review Board, a group which Mr. Whelan has criticized many times since its inception in May, 1973.

Mr. Whelan said he is concerned about the review board which does not have to report to any minister or to Parliament.

"It's about as close to anarchy as we come in this country and I guess I'm partly responsible for that."

He was referring to the cabinet decision that established the board which reports to the public.

The agriculture minister also told delegates at the annual meeting of Unifarm, Alberta's major farm organization, that he believes the Canadian wheat board should be under the agriculture department. It now is the responsibility of Justice Minister Otto Lang.

"I always tell Otto I can give agriculture all the justice it needs."

Grit Ridings Score On L.I.P. Handouts

OTTAWA (CP) — Figures released Wednesday on the latest batch of Local Initiatives Program grants show that Liberal ridings get the major share of the funds.

A total of $4.91 million in grants, bringing the 1974-75 program to $95 million, was announced by Manpower Minister Robert Andras with the assurance that the "allocation . . . is totally objective."

There have been numerous charges in the Commons that LIP grants are made politically rather than on the basis of need. This has been denied by the government.

Of the 52 projects announced Wednesday, 27 are Liberal ridings, 18 in ones held by Conservatives, four to Social Credit seats, two to New Democratic Party holdings and one to Moncton riding, held by Leonard Jones, the lone Independent in the 264-seat Commons.

"The formula we have applied has effectively provided communities having the highest rate of unemployment with the major share of LIP funds," Mr. Andras said in a news release.

As usual, Quebec got the largest number of grants, a total of 13 worth $1.42 million. Ten of these, worth $859,900, went to projects in Liberal ridings. The largest single amount, however, was $245,000 for a project in Roberval, a seat held by Social Credit MP Charles-Arthur Gauthier.

The second-largest grant, $204,100, went to the Liberal seat of Bonaventure-Iles-de-la-Madeleine, while the smallest, $10,200, went to Liberal-held Frontenac.

The four others, worth a total of $417,700, went to Social Credit ridings.

The national breakdown was Liberals $2.95 million, Conservatives $1.42 million, Social Credit $417,700, NDP $75,200 and Mr. Jones $51,600.

The largest provincial total was British Columbia's $1.56 million for eight projects, with $851,200 going for four in Conservative ridings and $706,800 for four in Liberal ridings. A project in Conservative Howard Johnston's Okanagan-Kootenay seat got the biggest single B.C. grant, $272,800.

Other provincial totals, in order of size, were:

Newfoundland $755,600 for five projects, New Brunswick $661,600 for seven, Ontario $334,400 for eight, Alberta $102,400 for six and Prince Edward Island $80,000 for three. There were no LIP grants for projects in Nova Scotia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan or the two northern territories in this latest group.

TOTALS CLOSE

Although two of the three P.E.I. grants went to Conservative seats, their total of $41,400 was nearly matched by the $38,600 that went to Cardigan riding, held by Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald.

The B.C. Liberals' total of $706,800 was overshadowed slightly by the Conservatives' total of $851,200. The largest grant, $258,900, went for a project in Prince George-Peace River, held by Conservative Frank Oberle.

LIP grants are worked out on a formula of Statistics Canada and manpower department unemployment figures, worked out by the Liberals after they were stung by opposition allegations that the grants were made on a political basis.

'Guzzlers' Must Pay

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary Rogers Morton of the U.S. says Americans are going to have to swallow "a tonic of pretty bitter-tasting medicine" if the United States and its industrial partners in Western Europe and Japan are to solve long-range energy problems.

Morton, who doubles as head of President Ford's Energy Resources Council, also said the new energy proposals Ford plans to send Congress next year will "have to concentrate a great deal of power" in whoever heads up the program.

Morton made the remarks Tuesday at a dinner meeting of the trilateral commission, a group of 200 private citizens from Western Europe, Japan and the United States set up in 1973 to encourage co-operative answers to long-range mutual problems.

Whatever action the United States takes, he said, is the key because "we are the guzzlers. We have got to solve our problem for your sake."

It was in that context that he said "we are going to have to come up with a tonic of pretty bitter-tasting medicine."

There is no current shortage of gasoline or home heating oil, he added but the world eventually will run out of fossil fuels unless it cuts back consumption while it was concentrating on alternate energy sources such as solar and nuclear power. The U.S. Federal Energy Administration, meanwhile, said Tuesday some fuel-oil suppliers may have engagaged in price-gouging in selling to public utilities, possibly resulting in overcharges of tens of millions of dollars.

The FEA said its investigation is focusing on 20 fuel-oil suppliers servicing 11 public utilities in the South, East and Midwest that raised the price of heating oil and residual fuel oil "by as much as 300 per cent between the refineries and utilities."

The excessive price the utilities paid for the oil then allegedly was passed along to the consumers under "fuel escalation clauses" by which regulatory commissions permit electric companies to automatically pass along the higher cost of fuel to consumers. Government sources said that there is no indication that the companies that refined the oil had anything to do with the schemes. Investigators said.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When this deal was played in a high-stakes rubber-bridge game, Terence Reese of England — one of the world's greatest players — was sitting East. An example of his thought processes can be observed in the deal. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ Q 3 ♥ K 10 8 6 5 ♦ 7 4 ♣ 9 8 5 2
WEST ♠ J 9 5 4 ♥ J 4 3 ♦ Q 9 6 ♣ A K 6		EAST ♠ K 10 8 7 ♥ Q 9 7 ♦ 8 2 ♣ Q J 10 3
	SOUTH ♠ A 6 2 ♥ A 2 ♦ A K J 10 5 3 ♣ 7 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

When West opened the king of clubs, Reese, in the East seat, came to the proper conclusion that the defenders' best chance of defeating South's contract was by getting a couple of spade tricks. This could be accomplished only if dummy were prevented from ruffing spades.

On the lead of the club king, Reese dropped the queen. This was a conventional play, which showed possession of the jack, and commanded West to underlead his ace. West dutifully did so, and East took the trick with his ten. To trick three, East led a trump, South winning with his king.

Declarer, hoping that West possessed the king of spades, now led the spade deuce towards dummy's queen. Reese won with the king, and returned his remaining trump. Declarer's cause was now lost. Whes play had ended, the defenders had made two club tricks, two spades, and one trump.

Had Reese not played the club queen at trick one, West would probably have cashed the club ace. He could then not have prevented declarer from making his contract, for declarer after losing a spade to East's king, would have been able to ruff out his third spade with the board's remaining trump (East, upon winning with his spade king, would have led a trump, leaving dummy with one trump).

Unfortunately for declarer, he had the misfortune to be playing against Reese, who visualized that his partner might not be able to lead a trump at trick two without sacrificing a trick. So Reese took control by playing the queen of clubs on the opening lead, which enabled him to obtain the lead at trick two. He could now make the desired trump lead without sacrificing a trick — and he did so, thus bringing about declarer's downfall.

'POWDER-PUFF' BATTLE LOOMS

TORONTO (UPI) — Behind the glamor and false eyelashes of Canada's multi-million-dollar fashion industry a bitter dispute is boiling to the surface.

Canadian models claim their jobs are being stolen by high-priced American models and are demanding a government crackdown to limit the number of "powderpuff pirates."

Representatives of the Toronto-based Talent Agents Association of Canada plan to meet with federal officials next week to press the demand.

"We are tired of being marshmallows taking a Mickey Mouse stance," association spokesman Jerry Lodge said. "It is making the girls second-class citizens in their own country.

"We first raised the issue a year ago but non-Canadians are still flooding in, taking jobs while our girls may be struggling to pay the rent."

The problem was sharply pointed up recently when immigration department officials tipped off by an anonymous caller — apparently a miffed Canadian model — interrupted a photographic session involving four models from New York.

The Americans, two women and two men, lacked Canadian work permits. So did four other people with them — a Venezuelan woman, two British and Italian cameramen and a French male hairdresser.

Backed by a lawyer from Eaton's the country's largest department store chain, the group called at federal manpower offices and swiftly obtained the permits. They then returned to modelling at an Eaton's studio.

"According to regulations, a foreigner cannot be hired for a job if a suitable Canadian is available," a Toronto girl said bitterly. "But in this case — as in so many others — the manpower department didn't even check. The permits were issued and the whole matter was settled in an hour and a half.

New Mint Nearly Ready

WINNIPEG (CP) — A new Royal Canadian Mint with the capacity of producing 500 million coins a year on a single-shift basis is nearing the final stages of completion.

Mint director Kenneth Grant said the first coins will be rolling off the presses at the end of January, although the official opening is not scheduled until mid-summer.

Grant said in a recent interview the mint will be one of the world's most sophisticated money-making plants.

"This should be the most modern mint in the world. We availed ourselves of the latest equipment and technology we could find."

The plant, built in conjunction with a 12-storey office building in a Winnipeg suburb, will be almost totally automated.

The various metals and coins will be shuttled throughout the plant by way of electronically-controlled boxes, and overhead and floor-level conveyor belts.

If necessary, the plant will be able to produce up to one billion coins annually on a double-shift basis. In contrast, the mint in Ottawa would have to work three shifts a day to achieve a comparable production level.

Planners have also designed the plant to obtain optimum efficiency and convenience for visitors.

Bears Going Cheap

GLASGOW, Scotland (UPI) — If anyone wants a bear for Christmas, a debt-ridden wildlife park not far from Glasgow is selling 30 live Grizzlies and Himalyans.

The Loch Lomond Wildlife Park went into liquidation Monday with debts of $1 million and assets of $417,000.

Owner Patrick Telfer-Smollett said the park had been hit by bad weather, low attendance and high taxes in the two years it had been in operation so he was selling off the animals to meet his debts.

"If anyone wants a pet for Christmas, the bears are going for a song," he said.

Inventions Born In Cobble Hill

COBBLE HILL (UPI) — When you have insomnia you pace the floor, maybe take a sleeping pill or promise yourself not to eat so much before going to bed.

When Sebastian De Groot can't sleep he invents spill proof oil tankers. Or organic beer cans that can be recycled or break down naturally. Or electronic devices for planting and growing seeds in developing countries.

"Being an inventor is a 24-hour a day job," De Groot says.

"Inspiration comes at the strangest times — when you are standing in a park, when you are eating in a restaurant, or sometimes when you can't sleep."

De Groot, a native of Holland, lives in the small town of Cobble Hill, about 20 miles north of Victoria, with his wife. He studied engineering in Europe, but did not graduate, and subsequently worked for a truck manufacturer in the engineering division.

When he arrived in Canada shortly after the Second World War, De Groot went into horse breeding and ran a riding school in British Columbia. He suspended his equestrian activities after his children grew up, and has devoted all his time to inventions in the past few years.

"I started thinking about watertight compartments, and honeycomb constructions for docks and wharfs, built on jointed supports that would allow them to rise and fall with the tides," he said.

"Eventually I realized you could do the same thing with oil tankers."

After two years of work, the 58-year-old inventor applied for a U.S. patent, still pending, and both government and industry have recently shown some interest in the tanker.

De Groot's proposed tanker would resemble an ocean-going train made up of self-contained units coupled to allow vertical and lateral movements "much like a snake."

"The construction means that it doesn't resist the forces of the sea, but gives in to them. This would eliminate the danger of breaking up in high seas that designers are seeing in conventional stretched hull steel tankers."

The oil would be contained in rigid honeycomb structures enveloped in an outside hull. Constructed of lightweight reinforced concrete, the honeycombs could allow transportation of liquefied natural gas as well as oil.

Individual units, self-contained and of shallow draft, could be uncoupled automatically and left at most ports, eliminating the need for special supertanker facilities, according to De Groot.

The honeycomb construction of the units, with each cell independent, would preclude the possibility of large oil spills, even if the ship were cut in half.

Powering the convoy would boat in the lead, with smaller be a jet engine equipped tow-engines at the stern to maintain tension.

"I have been talking with government agencies, and with executives in the oil industry about this and they seem interested." De Groot said "it could even replace pipelines."

No Smiles After Oil Talks

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadian leaders of three multinational oil companies, reassessing their financing of a $1-billion-plus project to develop the Athabasca oil sands, met for one and a half hours Tuesday with Premier Peter Lougheed but emerged to say only that the discussion was "constructive."

"The discussion was constructive and efforts directed towards allowing the project to proceed are continuing," said Robert V. Sellers, chairman of Canada-Cities Service Ltd., in a brief statement he read to reporters.

"That's all we have to say."

Sellers, J. A. Armstrong, president of Imperial Oil Ltd., and Jerry McAfee, president of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., immediately left the legislative buiding.

A syncrude spokesman said he expects the three leaders to report to his company shortly with the results of the discussion.

The three companies have first refusal to pick up the 30-per-cent share of syncrude dropped last week by Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd., (Arcan) which said rising costs and uncertainty over oil prices made it impractical for to continue with its investment.

All three companies said after Arcan's withdrawal that they were to produce 125,000 barrels of oil a day starting in 1976 from the oil-saturated sands of northeastern Alberta.

The Syncrude spokesman said the three leaders have been meeting with Syncrude officials to discuss future financing of the project.

Premier Lougheed declined to comment on the meeting and did not emerge from his office as the oil leaders departed. Mines Minister Bill Dickie and Attorney-General Merv Leitch also attended the meeting but remained with the premier afterwards. They also sent word that they would not have any comments.

Both the Alberta and federal governments have said they might be willing to pick up some or all of the share of Syncrude dropped by Arcan.

Syncrude has completed ground-clearing and preliminary construction work at the plant site 20 miles north of Fort McMurray. Arcan officials have estimated that they have already poured $20 million into the project. Imperial and Canada-Cities have an equivalent 30-per-cent investment while Gulf has a 10-per-cent interest in the project.

91st YEAR, No. 154 ★★★ VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1974 ★★★ 15 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

Prices in Biggest Spiral Since World War II

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index rose by 12 per cent during the last 12 months for the fastest rate of gain since price controls were being taken off after the Second World War, Statistics Canada reported today.

The index was up by 1.1 per cent in November and is 12 per cent above that of a year earlier.

It was the highest rise for November since 1925 although two other months this year have exeeded a 1.1 per cent rise in the index.

Higher prices for food and new cars accounted for about two-thirds of the increase in November. Household operation costs also were major contributors.

The last time there was a faster 12-month rise in the consumer price index was between October, 1974, and October, 1948, when it went up 12.2 per cent.

Wage and price controls brought in during the war were taken off gradually, ending finally in 1949.

The only price break last month was a decline of nine-tenths of one per cent in the public transportation index. This was due to cheaper train travel — not lower fares, but more economy-price days due to the tourist travel period.

The private transportation index was up 2.4 per cent, with more than half of this increase due to higher new-car prices.

Sugar, fresh vegetables and milk price rises were major contributors to a 1.3-per-cent rise in the food index. These were partly offset by lower prices for fresh fruit and many meat products.

The November index level was 174.1. Stated another way the mix of consumer items that could be bought for $100 in 1961 cost $174.10 last month, $172.20 in October and $155.50 in November of last year.

The purchasing power of the 1961 dollar was down to 57 cents by last month.

The consumer price index is based on a 1967 survey of family spending patterns and weights of major component indexes are: Food, 25 per cent; housing, 31 per cent; clothing, 11 per cent; transportation, 15 per cent; and other items, 18 per cent.

The price indexes for November do not account for the effects of sales tax changes announced Nov. 18 in a federal budget. These affected a variety of items, including cars, liquor, tobacco, bicycles and building materials, and apply at the wholesale level.

Statisticians said it will take up to two or three months for the impact of most of the tax changes to reach consumer prices.

The November food index level was 15.7 per cent above a year earlier. The restaurant food index was 18 per cent higher while there was a gain of 15.3 per cent in the index for food eaten at home.

The next largest 12-month gain was 13 per cent in the index for household operations, followed by 12.4 per cent for the private transportation index. Oil prices account for a large share of these increases during the year — gasoline for cars and heating fuel for houses. During the last three months gasoline prices have dropped.

Higher prices for men's clothing was the main contributor to a one-per-cent increase in the clothing price index.

The health and personal care index rose by 1.2 per cent, mainly due to higher prices for hair care.

New Wheels For PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has a new car. It cost more than $80,000, is equipped with armor plating and bullet-proof glass and has two telephones. (See picture on Page 56).

The car is his alone. Except in the most unusual circumstances he will not have to lend it to the Queen or anyone else.

Because it is silver grey, it probably will become known as the grey ghost or silver dart as it carries the prime minsiter about in super safety.

The 1975 Cadillac Fleetwood appeared this week when the prime minister met the prime minister of Iran who arrived Monday for a six-day visit.

This simple basic black car will go into spare status, being used for visits.

Region Pays $750,000 For Dump

The Capital Regional District is buying the Hartland Road garbage dump and some surrounding land for $750,000.

The purchase involves 788 acres in an agreement for sale with Victoria Disposal Co. Ltd. and Norman Copley, disclosed by regional board chairman Jim Campbell in an interview Tuesday.

Negotiations have been going on privately for some time and last month the regional board gave initial approval to a bylaw authorizing the borrowing of $1 million "for the purpose of acquiring land and fixed plant for refuse disposal facilities."

The regional district is the local government agency responsible for garbage disposal but existing dumps are privately owned.

Hartland Road — biggest of the dumps — is at the end of Hartland Road, just beyond Saanich in the Highland district.

"There are no specific dates when we'll begin operating the dump," said Campbell.

"There are quite a few possibilities regarding change but for some while at least the main disposal will be on the basis of current practice at Hartland Road."

Campbell said "some specialized functions" will be developed at the site including an area for receiving septic tank wastes "which have to be put in an area where they can be safely isolated.

While disclosing the Hartland Road agreement for sale, Campbell indicated the regional board is interested in a second dump site to serve the western suburbs including Langford and Colwood.

"I believe another site is being contemplated and this money (the $1 million bylaw) might supply an additional site but it will also be for capital costs to make Hartland Road better," he said.

U.K. STOCKS, POUND NOSEDIVE

LONDON (AP) — The London stock market dived to a 20-year low today and the British pound dropped to its lowest level ever against the world's major currencies.

Financial sources blamed the declines on reports that Arab oil money was being pulled out of London for Paris. The French franc strengthened in money markets.

Stockbrokers said Britain's monthly trade figures for November, due out Thursay, also were depressing share prices. A deficit of some $1 billion was expected.

Body Back

BANGKOK (UPI) — Burmese police recovered the stolen body of U Thant early today after widespread rioting erupted and the declaration of marital law.

Police moved in with teargas shortly after midnight local time to disperse the students guarding Thant's body in a makeshift mausolem on the campus of Rangoon University, according to radio reports.

It was then buried again and the grave sealed with cement.

The swift-moving crisis began Sunday when students and monks seized the body of the former UN secretary-general during its funeral demanding that Thant be given a burial befitting a world leader. They then buried it in a makeshift mausoleum on the university campus.

Tax Review Pledged Says Barrett

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday that Finance Minister John Turner has promised to review tax policies on natural gas sold through provincial petroleum corporations.

Barrett, who returned to B.C. Tuesday from the conference of finance ministers in Ottawa, had strongly criticized Turner for a budget measure which allows the federal government to tax companies selling natural gas to provincial agencies as if they were selling at market prices, whether or not the agency pays a market price for the gas.

Barrett said that when Energy Minister Donald Macdonald agreed in September to raise the export price of natural gas to $1 a thousand cubic feet, he established the B.C. Petroleum Corp's buying price of 22 cents as the fair market value on which private producers should be taxed.

The premier added: "We openly negotiated with Macdonald and really, we followed his instructions.

But Barrett said he got a commitment from Turner to "review everything in terms of the fair market price — hopefully he will back off."

The premier said there were "no divisions" at the conference among the provinces in their opposition to the federal government's plans to disallow deduction of provincial royalties from corporate taxable income, a policy enunciated at a meeting in Toronto early this year.

"It comes as a shock to find the federal government ignores this position completely," he said.

Barrett refused to expand on comments made earlier Tuesday to the effect that federal policies are encouraging advocates of western separatism.

Turner also said Tuesday he has made no decisions on how

ULSTER MEN WIN SUIT AGAINST U.K.

BELFAST (Reuter) — Four men who said they were brutally ill-treated by British security forces in Northern Ireland in 1971 were awarded a total of $118,000 damages in Ulster High Court Tuesday.

Three now are held by the authorities in the Maze prison.

They were awarded damages against the defence ministry and former Northern Ireland ministry of home affairs, after alleging ill-treatment following their arrest on Aug. 9, 1971, the day that internment without trial was introduced to try to reduce guerrilla violence.

Meanwhile, the Irish Republican Army (IRA) says it will hang two British soldiers for any IRA member hanged in Britain.

The statement referred to the debate opening in the British House of Commons today on whether to restore capital punishment for acts of terrorism.

Women Given Edge

MONTREAL (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang said Tuesday that he gives preference to women over equally qualified men when making judicial appointments.

"Not only would I appoint an equally-qualified woman if I was choosing between the woman and the man, but I would indeed choose a qualified woman even over a slightly better qualfied man for appointment to the bench," he said in a speech prepared for the Women's Federation of Allied Jewish Community Services.

Lang said it is important to act in such a manner to help break society's traditional attitudes about women's roles.

"We will overcome those attitudes most quickly and effectively by having women in positions where women can exercise and be seen to exercise the highest roles or responsibility and judgment."

Lang devoted much of his speech to the government-proposed human rights and fair administrative practices commission, an agency he hoped will be operating at the federal level by the summer.

The agency would inform people about the problems of discrimination and what can be done to deal with it. It would also have "an ombudsman-type function," Lang said.

DUMMY GUARDS URGED

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP John Reynolds suggested Tuesday that penitentiary officials take a hint from prisoners and place dummies on night watchtower duty at a British Columbia penitentiary.

The query followed a Commons exchange in which Solicitor-General Warren Allmand explained that two men escaped from the New Westminster prison last week after placing dummies in their cells.

The escape came during the midnight-to-8 a.m. period when the watchtowers are not manned because prisoners are supposed to be in their cells.

"In this case, they put dummies in their cells and hid in the yard," Allmand said. "After lock-up, they escaped."

Street Hawkers May Win A Reprieve From City

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

There may yet be happy hawkers on downtown Victoria's sidewalks.

Apparently doomed to extinction last week, by the proposed imposition of a whopping $700 trades licence, the street vendors were at least partially back in official favor by Tuesday as city council continued discussing its draft trades licence bylaw.

Among the council members who appeared to be having second thoughts on the matter was Mayor Peter Pollen, who inquired at the caucus meeting what the objective was in levying such a high licence fee.

Was it to "clear them (hawkers) off the streets?"

Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of the commerce, industry and tourism committee, who helped draw up the bylaw, replied that it was.

"We don't want street hawkers," he said.

But Pollen retorted: "I find that rather incredible. I don't think any of us are out to eliminate hawkers entirely."

The mayor said street vendors were "a disaster" on Vancouver's Granville Street Mall, but added: "Having said that, let's also say that in certain areas and under reasonable control they are fulfilling a function in the community."

He said "patronizing" editorials written by "nitwits" in Victoria newspapers, on city council's attitude toward the practice of street selling, weren't helping toward clear and unemotional debate.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson said a ban on hawking wasn't the intent of council's earlier "instructions to Tindall." He proposed lowering the $700 licence fee to $250.

Adoption Probe Sought After Korean 'Kidnap'

The human resources department wants an investigation into procedures involved in bringing Korean children here for adoption, following a report that one such Korean child may have been kidnapped.

Superintendent of child welfare Vic Belknap said in a Canadian Press story that B.C. wants the Canadian embassy in South Korea to make the study.

B.C. parents will be discouraged from adopting Korean children until the investigation is completed, said Belknap in the story.

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi last week halted an adoption hearing after it was learned the Korean child being adopted was allegedly kidnapped.

Human resources had been told that the child, three-year-old Uyng Im Lee, had been abandoned in Seol and then taken to the government adoption agency there.

However, during the adoption hearing in Seoul, people claiming to be parents of the girl told the Korean agency the child had been kidnapped by a housemaid on Nov. 17, 1972, Belknap said.

The provincial government is now trying to determine the real identity of the girl and why the parents waited more than a year to come forward, he said.

"In Korea it may not be that simple," he said. "I understand there are many, many abandoned children."

Mrs. Ira Preddy, deputy superintendent of child welfare, said today she was surprised to hear Belknap wants adoptions discouraged until the investigation was done, just because of one incident.

She said the number of overseas children coming to B.C. is still only a trickle, about 30 a year.

They come from South Korea and South Vietnam, with a few from Bangladesh and India, she said.

"There are quite a lot of people who are interested in offering their homes," she said. A continent-wide shortage of orphans in North America has forced people to look to Asia and Africa for children.

Adopting a child from Vietnam or Korea can be a "slow tortuous business," said Mrs. Preddy.

In Vietnam the adoption procedures must go through the Vietnamese courts, which can take from six to 14 months, she said.

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Federal-provincial jealousy has stymied efforts of Greater Victoria school board to get into the cablevision field, trustees were told Tuesday.

The board wants a $20,000 study on of feasibility of buying or leasing an old cable from Victoria Cablevision.

The cable, which now connects all but two district schools, is becoming redundant as the cablevision firm completes a new city-wide hookup.

It could provide a closed-circuit cablevision system for the school district.

Superintendent of schools Jake Longmore told the board's legislation committee that the federal communications department has allocated $350 million to make similar studies across the country.

But the board's attempt to tap some of these funds has been held up at the provincial government level since March, Longmore said.

The hangup is the new provincial communications department, he said.

That department, just a year old, is "quite sincere in wanting to establish its jurisdiction," said Longmore.

It hasn't decided whether to let the federal government do the feasibility study, whether to do the study ifself, or whether to defer the matter.

Longmore said a provincial communications official told him the school board was lucky to have two levels of government falling all over it trying to help.

"Mr. Chairman, they're falling in front of us and I have to climb over them," he said.

He said he's "horribly afraid" other provinces will beat British Columbia to get the federal funds while the federal-provincial jurisdiction dispute goes on.

Then "the province of B.C. will find itself as it did 15 years ago with vocational money, getting only the dregs."

The federal government at that time was offering the province funding for vocational schools.

Longmore said there is a "very active debate" going on between the B.C. government and Ottawa concerning jurisdiction over B.C. Telephone Co. and of cablevision.

Several trustees echoed his frustration.

"Are we really going to be prevented by the political ambitions of the provincial government from getting what is right for this community," asked Walter Donald.

Longmore met 10 days ago with Charles Dalfen, deputy minister of transport and communication, to again plead the board's case.

Dalfen told him it was his opinion that the study should be done by the provincial government.

The board is now waiting for a final answer from Dalfen.

NECESSARY BUT . . .

'I Hate Cameras' Says Beny

max low

Sunlight so bright streams through the windows and you're certain that amid all the singing and stamping, death will come soon.

You are midway now between dry and dusty Tehran and the lush green of Babolsar, lying in its sticky humidity on the shore of the Caspian Sea.

But you're sure you'll never make it as the bus moves faster and faster on the narrow, winding road over the Alborz Mountains and the driver joins his fellow Iranian passengers in singing and stamping his feet and even managing to clap his hands a few times as the bus swings across to the wrong side of the road and they all laugh as you cover your eyes. Down in the valley below, two battered buses lie on their sides and the driver shows all his shiny white teeth as he grins beneath his moustache and gleefully points them out to you.

Many things are desperately serious in Iranian life — the Moslem religion with the wailing from the mosques, the sombre parades on holidays of mourning, and even the celebration of Now Ruz, the Persian New Year on March 21 — but, unfortunately, driving isn't one of them.

The Iranians take to the roads with a kind of gay abandon and hardly any driving knowledge and vie for what little space there is with donkeys laden with carrots and mandarin oranges and often with camel trains bringing wares from the tribes into the city bazaar. And they have no idea of how to count the number of seats in a car. A news item in the English-language daily paper Kayhan International will tell you with no hint of humor: "Injuries were suffered by 17 people when the Volkswagen Beetle they were riding in went out of control and rolled over."

I guess it was that little chat with Roloff Beny, when the famed Canadian artist-photographer was in Victoria recently, that started me thinking about one of my old haunts. Thinking about riding donkeys in the cool, clear air of the foothills to escape the heat of Tehran; about the little carpet-washing place at Chesh m'ali south of the city where men and women beat Persian rugs with a kind of gentle brutality, dunk them in the murky river waters and then sprawl them on the rocks to dry in the sun; and about the kind of Middle East corruption that upset the students at the Civil Aviation training school at Tehran's International Airport (where I taught English between sessions at Kayhan) when the school's director Dr. Hosseini collected money for their text books and the books never arrived. "Dr. Hosseini has eaten our money," they would say.

Beny lounged on a couch in a suite at the Empress, like a kind of Noel Coward of the photographic world, and talked of his work and himself. He is following his nine immaculately-produced but ultra-scenic works with a grand volume entitled "Persia: Bridge of Turquoise" and that's what got me excited. For Beny deals not so much with subjects but with moods, with seasons and with light and dark. And surely nowhere can there be such contrast as there is in the brilliant sunlight and blueness of the sky by day and the bright nearness of the Persian stars at night.

Some of Beny's work has been strongly criticized, particularly his latest book "Roloff Beny in Italy," for the lack of people in his pictures. But there is no denying he is brilliant in the artistic sense and his Canadian book "To Every Thing There is a Season" sold 45,000 copies in this country alone.

Criticism doesn't bother Beny too much. In fact, he likes to be considered controversial. On his cross-Canada tour he delighted in telling Canadian Clubs of Canada members in 10 cities that he hated cameras and didn't like being called a photographer Waving an imaginary baton over his head, he says in a dream-like way that it's more like being the conductor of an orchestra.

Beny says he used to have "complex equipment" but now has cut down to working with two Nikkons and two Hasselblads. "I hate cameras," he says, pointing out generously that they're "necessary, of course, but they shouldn't dominate but should act as a catalyst between my eye and the subject matter."

The maestro isn't modest. "The camera is the minor object in my books, which I design, edit and in fact do completely," he points out without taking a breath.

Defending his book on Italy, Beny concedes that it isn't basically on Italians or on the clutter of the country but rather on the landscape and on "what the hand of man has created in 3,000 years." He has, he says, tried to project, like a layer cake, the diversified strata that is visually exciting.

"My photography is anti-documentary," Beny stresses. "It is the times of day and the way in which the light changes that excites me rather than the subject matter itself."

Criticism or not, there is no doubt that Beny knows Italy. He was born in Medicine Hat but left there when he was 16 and has lived in a penthouse overlooking the Tiber in Rome for the last 25 years.

Beny loves Iran, which he has visited on and off for 12 years and where he has spent a great deal of the last two years travelling in a station wagon with an Iranian driver and "a sort of court archeologist" who accompanies him everywhere.

The visual part of his book on Persia is complete and has gone to be processed in Verona, Italy. Like his Italian book, the next one will be published in Canada by McLelland and Stewart because, says Beny, "I want this to be a cultural link between Iran and Canada."

"Persia: Bridge of Turquoise" will avoid the potographically obvious. It won't dwell on the famous ruins of Persepolis or the beautiful mosques of Isfahan, the ancient capital. "I dealt heavily with Persepolis in my book "Pleasure of Ruins," explains Beny. "My new book shows the out-of-the-way places, the vanishing mud cities, the crumbling Islamic mosques and the nomadic people."

Finally, is there a word for budding young shutterbugs hoping to take up this kind of art-photography? Well, no there isn't really, says Beny. "You learn it by exposure to situations," he says. "There is no school you can go to," and then with a smile " . . . except perhaps, the school of Life."

Shoal Suits STOL Role

Victoria's role for STOL is mainly on the Shoal — Shoal Point, that is.

Officials of Air West Airlines Ltd. and the de Havilland aircraft company of Toronto told Victoria city council Tuesday that Shoal Point, site of the former VMD shipyard, appears to be the most suitable location for a STOL (short takeoff and landing) airstrip near the city centre.

Air West hopes to obtain such a facility for a regular land-based downtown-to-downtown air service linking Victoria with Vancouver, Seattle and other centres.

The VMD site has been purchased by the federal ministry of transport for an outer-harbor marine services base which is scheduled for completion in 1977, and the two companies' representatives urged the city to open immediate discussions with the federal agency on the feasibility of incorporating a STOL runway in the plans for the base.

They said such a service would be operated by the de Havilland company's ultra-quiet turboprop plane, the Dash 7, which is scheduled to begin test flights early next year and can land on 2,000-foot runways — less than a third of the distance required for conventional aircraft.

(Air West president Norm Gold announced last July that his company had placed orders for two of the planes.)

Arthur Toplis, head of de Havilland's operations analysis group, told council Tuesday the 48-passenger Dash 7, because of its steep angle of climb and landing approach, leaves a "noise footprint" at ground level of less than half a square mile, compared with 30 square miles for conventional aircraft.

If the plane was operating from the proposed runway in James Bay, the noise nuisance at Dallas and Simcoe would be "less than an ordinary diesel truck" passing through, he said.

Toplis said while Shoal Point appears to be the most appropriate location for a STOL strip it is not the only feasible one.

Among other sites the company had studied were Store Street in Victoria's Old Town, land now occupied by a lumber yard at Lime Bay, the Songhees industrial reserve and Esquimalt harbor.

But Toplis said the Songhees and Esquimalt sites had been ruled out "fairly early on" as being too distant from the city centre.

Gold assured aldermen that the introduction of a STOL service would eliminate most of the city's present concerns with regard to the company's floatplane operations in Inner Harbor waters — particularly the noise and safety factors.

But he said even with the company's proposal to provide increased air service to Seattle, by up to four flights per day, he was confident that it would maintain its safety record.

"We will never allow the number of flights to increase to the point where we are playing Russian roulette," he added.

Ald. Sam Bawlf remarked that the city's plans for greater leisure use of the Inner Harbor, including the provision of more berthing facilities for private boats, were bound to reduce the margin of safety in relation to air operations.

City Hall Pay Offer Rejected

Inside workers at City Hall turned down a wage offer Tuesday which was the first increase over the standard 12 per cent raise offered to and rejected by local government employees in Greater Victoia.

"We are hoping they come back with something to improve it," Doug Casey, president of Local 388 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said today.

If not, he added, the membership of the 230 salaried employees has given approval to apply for a mediation officer.

Casey said rejection of the second offer, by a narrow margin, was because it did not bring City Hall clerical pay up to provincial government levels and did not contain a cost-of living clause.

The lowest scale for a clerk or typist of $446 a month would have increased to $598, he said, but this is $21 a month less than the provincial employees who will also get a cost-of-living clause April 1.

He said lower-paid clerks and typists have been "ripped off' in recent years and while "the offer brought them up it was not enough."

The offer, made by the city's negotiating team headed by area negotiator — coordinator E. E. Pearlman, amounted to 15.76 per cent for higher-grade technical and engineering staff.

"We're not that far apart," said Casey. "I still can see a settlement."

City outside workers, meanwhile, will meet Thursday to decide on a date for a strike vote. Their last offer was the standard area proposal of 12 per cent wage hike in a one-year contract and has been turned down.

No Charade Please!

Members of Victoria city council indicated Tuesday they aren't prepared to act out any "charade" to help publicize Oxfam's relief effort for the world's hungry and deprived.

In caucus session, they flatly rejected a proposal from local Oxfam official Kay Lines that the mayor and aldermen pose for publicity photographs "with an empty plate and a glass of water in front of you."

Lines said in a letter the object of the exercise would be to promote an "awareness fast" scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 19.

Mayor Peter Pollen advised council to decline the invitation as "inappropriate," and said for doing so he would probably "get ripped off by the press tomorrow."

Said Ald. Mike Young: "To set up a charade like this is patently ridiculous. This particular promotion doesn't lend itself to our support."

Pollen started to say: "Presumably this (the fast) will make the White Anglo-Saxons in our community feel . . ." but never finished the sentence.

Ald. Sam Bawlf said jokingly, however, that aldermen already had glasses of water in the committee room so all the photographer need do was "bring eight or nine plates to our regular caucus meeting."

"In-camera," added Ald. Bill Tindall.

Interim Parking On Park?

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government is still searching for property for its park-and-ride service and may have to use Cuthbert Holmes Park on the Trans-Canada Highway on an interim basis if other land isn't found soon.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said Tuesday the government is looking for "something more permanent" but may have to resort to using the parkland for the several hundred cars which will be left on the outskirts of town under the park-and-ride scheme.

The scheme, designed to eliminate several hundred parking spaces in the legislative precinct and to ease traffic at rush hour, would involve civil servants driving to one or more central parking lots where they would be taken to work on shuttle buses.

Service was expected to begin this fall but the government has run into problems acquiring parking areas and buses.

Lorimer said some of the new buses have arrived but others are being held up by strikes.

"The service will begin as soon as we get the buses," he said, adding that he hopes by that time to also have some new property purchased but if not part of the parkland on the corner of Burnside and the Trans-Canada Highway will be levelled and used as a parking lot.

B.C. Buys Downtown Property

The provincial government has purchased a nine-lot parcel of land in downtown Victoria for $723,000.

Included in the parcel are a car lot on Yates Street used by Speedway Motors, the former Gibson's Bowladrome and four lots on Johnson Street.

The car lot was purchased by the government recently for $263,000 and the other lafd was acquired last year for $460,000.

Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said the government "has no immediate plans" for the empty lots but is considering a mixed residential and commercial block with office space at the bottom and apartments at the top.

The bowladrome itself has been undergoing extensive renovations for several months and the two floors of office space will eventually be used for the highways department and purchasing commission.

Hartley said the government "assembled the land quietly as part of the government's policy of acquiring land in the downtown area."

Man, 81, Charged

Rueben Baker, 1340 Sussex, was remanded to Dec. 18 for election after saying he wanted to consult with a lawyer.

The forged documents are National Insurance Fund pension cheques from Her Majesty's Paymaster-General in Newcastle-Upon-Tyne, England, and were allegedly uttered in Esquimalt, Saanich and Victoria Oct. 25 and 26.

Each cheque was worth 41.4 English pounds.

A source said the Canadian value of the cheques was $1,253.

Sewage Scheme Refused

A Colwood store owner said Tuesday he is being refused a health permit for use of carbon coal treatment of septic tank waste.

Ted Chew, who runs a grocery store at 2155 Sooke Road where he and his family live, said he has been threatened with court action unless he switches to a conventional tile field.

"We don't discuss an individual's disposal unit with anyone except the individual," he said.

Asked if court action is contemplated, he said "If someone has not get a permit we take whatever action is indicated."

He said the carbon coal treatment is "experimental" and is being looked into by provincial engineers.

Arneil is awaiting results of an inquiry into coal bed systems on both the mainland and here, but he declined to identify the experimental one here as that installed by Vic Josephson at his Metchosin house.

Chew said he has been told by a health inspector that his store may be closed and that court action may be taken because he hasn't got a permit for his carbon coal system.

"I cannot see why," he said, adding that a slaughterhouse on the mainland uses a much bigger system than his.

"It does a better job and saves room and that is why I gave it a try," he said.

"Others do it, why not me? I'm not hurting people. And carbon coal is not cheap, about $600 or $700. It does a better job and is a better way."

The system uses gravel-sized coal in a long narrow filter bed through which trickles septic tank waste. Exactly how the coal removes pollutants from water is not fully known but extensive testing by the system's inventor — Cy Jones of White Rock, B.C. — and University of B.C. professor. Lionel Coulthard has shown the coal removes almost 100 per cent of organic material, nitrates and phosphates and heavy metals from waste water.

C. Saanich Adds Police

Two more policemen will be added immediately to the seven-member Central Saanich police force and possibly three others will be taken on later in the year, the municipality's police board decided Tuesday.

The five-man addition was recommended by Chief Bob Miles.

Mayor Jean Butler said the hiring of the three more will depend on help from senior governments.

"If financial assistance is not forthcoming with regard to policing Indian reserves, sharing costs of training and a federal-provincial sharing of costs, then the additional three men would be deferred," she said.

Miles said today he hoped the two recruits authorized would be taken on staff early in the New Year.

FOR B.C. CIVIL SERVANTS TWO DAYS OFF AT YULE

Provincial public servants will work all day Dec. 24 and have two days off for Christmas holidays this year, a day and a half less than their counterparts at the opposite end of the country in Nova Scotia.

The provincial secretary's office said today only Christmas Day (Wednesday) and Boxing Day (Thursday) would be observed by civil servants here, and they would be reporting for duty Friday, Dec. 27.

Obey Labor Act, Doctors Warned

The association said the legislature has decided that 11 groups of self-licensing professionals, from agrologists to veterinarians, including doctors and dentists, should comprise one bargaining unit. This is set down in the Public Service Labor Relations Act.

"The decision was no more acceptable to the dentists or the engineers than it was to the physicians but the other 10 groups obeyed the law and formed one unit for purposes of collective bargaining," the association said.

This was done "without in any way weakening their ties with their respective professional associations and now they are nearing the conclusion of a first agreement."

What the doctors appear to require, the association said, "is that the association and the affected cabinet minister violate both the letter and the intent of the legislation under the threat of disruptive actions.

If the legislature wants to exclude provincial salaried doctors from the bargaining unit then the law can be amended but the association "will have no part in breaking the law and it will take appropriate steps to ensure that none of those whom it is certified to represent, doctors included, do so."

Last weekend, the president-elect of the B.C. Medical Association, Dr. William Ibbott, said doctors could alter hours and reduce coverage to oppose being included in the association.

WOMAN LOOTS BANK, AND BANKER SMILES

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Carolyn Koesters looted the Toy National Bank of Sioux City of $1,712.50 during a five-minute promotional spree, and now her whole seven-member family can sit down to dinner together.

She is buying the family's first dining room table with part of the take.

Mrs. Koesters was chosen by lot for the money grab from among the visitors to the bank at its grand opening Saturday. The prize was five minutes to scoop up money from the floor of the vault and race it outside to an armored car.

At one point Mrs. Koesters, a 5-foot-6, 130-pound mother of five, managed to carry two 40-pound bags of coins at once.

HIGH WINDS TOSS JETS INTO CRASH

LONDON (UPI) — High winds sweeping London airport today picked up a Pan American World Airways Boeing 707 and slammed it into a Pan Am Boeing 747 parked nearby. Both planes were empty.

Mechanics worked for more than four hours to separate the jets. One wing tip of the 707 was broken off when it sliced down the side of the jumbo jet. Pan Am said damage to both planes was heavy.

Airport authorities said winds were gusting at more than 50 miles per hour at the time. Air traffic was not affected.

Police reported numerous instances in southern England of fallen trees blocking roads and rail lines. The strong winds brought snow to much of northern England and Scotland.

Cyclist Fair In Hospital

An 18-year-old man is in fair condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital after a car was in collision with the bike he was riding at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Douglas Preston of 1730 Kisber received face cuts and a concussion from the accident, which occurred on Cedar Hill Cross Road near Garnet.

The car was driven by Stanley Raybone of 4521 Duart.

Pole Fire Cuts Lights

A power pole fire at Douglas and Tolmie Tuesday night caused a blackout for about an hour in the Finlayson Street and Lakehill area.

A spokesman for B.C. Hydro said sparks which started coming from the pole about 10:15 p.m., broke into flames.

Cause of the fire was unknown this morning.

The fire was extinguished by the Saanich fire department, and power was restored about 11:45 p.m.

MOROZ ENDS HUNGER STRIKE

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Imprisoned Ukrainian historian Valentin Moroz has ended a 20-week hunger strike after authorities promised to ease his prison conditions, according to family sources.

Moroz wrote to his wife Paisa that he began taking food Nov. 22, they added.

The sources said authorities had promised that Moroz, 38, would not be returned to solitary confinement where he had been for two years.

He was sentenced in 1970 to a 14-year term — six years in jail, four in camp and four in exile — on charges of Ukranian nationalism and anti-Soviet agitation.

'Tis the Season To Be Wed

OKLAHOMA CITY — There will be no divorces during the Christmas season if Judge Raymond Naifeh has anything to say about it. A message posted on the doors to his courtroom says: "Notice. This court will not hear any divorce cases from Dec. 16 through Dec. 25, 1974. This moratorium is being declared for the purpose of keeping families together during the Christmas season."

NEW YORK — Lucien Rivard of Montreal, convicted drug smuggler who was the centre of an extradition battle nine years ago, will be released from prison next month and turned over to immigration authorities for deportation to Canada.

Rivard will be released Jan. 17 from federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., where he has been serving a 20-year term since 1965. He appeared before the Parole Board early in November.

LONDON — John Gordon, Scottish journalis who built up one of Britain's biggest-circulation newspapers with his abrasive style, died Monday, one day after his 84th birthday. Gordon, editor-in-chief of the right-wing Sunday Express regularly slammed what he considered the bunglings and bossiness of the British bureaucracy.

Born in Dundee in 1890 where he trained as a reporter, he joined The Sunday Express in 1928. He eventually pushed the circulation up to almost five million.

"It was simple," he oncesaid. "A newspaper editor must have a common-denominator mind. He must be an ordinary human being with ordinary interests who can reflect them in his paper."

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A black - and - white etching bought for $2.50 at a flea market by a college professor has turned out to be an original James McNeill Whistler etching worth $1,500. "I bought it because it looked like a good etching, and it was only $2.50," said Wade Hall.

LITTLE ROCK — A man who shot himself in the stomach during a sniping incident last weekend was in serious condition but alert today at the University of Arkansas Medical Centre. Mrs. Beverly Wood, public information officer for the hospital, said Barry Shirley, 26, was having a "great deal of pain" following surgery to remove the bullet from his stomach.

PHILADELPHIA — Siamese twins Clara and Alta Rodriguez are back in Children's Hospital here to recover from an intestinal virus. The 16-month-old sisters, joined at the pelvis since birth, were separated surgically on Sept. 18 and released from hospital Nov. 29.

WASHINGTON — The United States government made symbolic peace with Muhammad Ali Tuesday. Gerald Ford, commander-in-chief of the armed forces as well as president welcomed to the White House the heavyweight champion, who in 1967 refused induction on moral grounds as a member of the Black Muslim sect.

"My meetings with presidents of countries are completed now," Ali said, naming several other heads of state who had entertained him. He told Ford "You made a big mistake, letting me come here, because now that I see it, I'm going to have to run for your job."

"Sometimes, with the problems I have, I think you can have it," Ford replied.

What the Luftwaffe Couldn't...

CANTERBURY (UPI) — Weather and polluted air threaten to accomplish what the Nazi Luftwaffe failed to do to Canterbury cathedral in Second World War bombing raids.

Archbishop of Canterbury Donald Coggan warned Tuesday that the cathedral — spiritual centre of the Church of England — is decaying from the ravages of time, weather and pollution.

He spoke in launching an appeal to raise $8.2 million to preserve the church. All the cash must be raised privately, he told newsmen, since the government cannot by law give money to the church.

POT CAN GET YOU BUSTED IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE

BOSTON (UPI) — Regular smoking of marijuana can lead to larger breasts in a small percentage of men and women, a Harvard medical school doctor said today.

"I would think the chances would be in the vicinity of 100-to-1, but that's purely conjecture," said Dr. John Harmon. The chance would be about the same for those who smoke pot often regardless of their sex, he added.

Harmon said he and another harvard physician had seen 16 male patients with enlarged breasts during the past two years and had operated on four of them to remove excess tissue.

The case studies were also supported by laboratory tests in which rats developed larger breasts after being injected with THC, the ingredient which produces the "high" from marijuana smoking. The results were reported to the American College of Surgeons in October, he said.

"When the first patient came to us two years ago we naturally asked him what drugs he was taking. He said he wasn't taking any drugs but that he had smoked marijuana a lot," Harmon said. "From then on, the first thing we asked these patients was whether they smoked marijuana."

In all cases, he said, patients admitted smoking marijuana at least three times a week, and some smoked daily.

Mills Steps Down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After 16 years in the post, Rep. Wilbur Mills has decided to surrender the chairmanship of the House Ways and Means committee because of ill health, Speaker Carl Albert said Tuesday.

Mills made his decision on the advice of his doctor who is treating the 65-year-old democrat at Bethesda naval hospital for what was described as exhaustion, Albert said.

Even before the announcement — which was expected — Mills had lost considerable stature in the eyes of his peers after extensive publicity about his friendship with Annabel Battistella, a Washington stripper.

Albert, who spoke with Mills' doctor Tuesday, said no decision has been made on whether the 18-term lawmaker will resign from either the committee or from congress.

"He is not going to seek the chairmanship on the committee on ways and means," Albert told reporters. "The medical processes have not been completed and may not be for a while."
